Seized With Epileptic Fit, World War Veteran Is In Serious Condition

Fred H. Terwilliger Still Unconscious in Kingston Hospital Following Removal Saturday From Home Near Wallkill.

FOUND BY PEDDLER

Observed Lying on Floor, Near Pool of Blood and House Was In Great Disorder.

Fred H. Terwilliger, World War veteran, who lives with his mother between Tillson Lake and Wallkill, was reported in a serious condition at the Kingston Hospital this morning where he was taken Saturday evening following an epileptic fit at his home. Terwilliger is about 40 years old and was gassed during the war.

Just when he suffered the attack is not known as his condition was not discovered until about 6:30 o'clock Saturday when a peddler went to the house to investigate why the young man did not respond to a summons. The last he was seen about was on Friday when a neighbor talked with him. On Saturday morning Mrs. Habergo, who resides next door, was unable to arouse any response at the place but not suspecting anything wrong nothing was done to investigate the whereabouts of the young man.

Terwilliger lives with his mother. She left for New York a few days ago and at the time of the attack he was alone.

Saturday afternoon a vegetable peddler called at the home of Robert Decker who resides on one side of the Terwilliger home. It was learned that Terwilliger had failed to respond to efforts to reach him and Mr. Decker asked the peddler to investigate. Going to the house the peddler looked through the window and observed the young man lying on the floor, apparently unclothed, and there was a pool of blood on the floor. When Terwilliger failed to respond to the summons of the peddler Mrs. Habergo, who lives in one of the adjoining houses, was called and it was believed at the time that Terwilliger was dead. Coroner Leston DuBois of New Paltz was notified and went to the home to investigate. Trooper Klein accompanied the coroner to the scene and on arrival there they found that Terwilliger had suffered from a fit.

When the officials arrived the house was found to be in great disorder. Practically every piece of furniture on the lower floor was upset and apparently when Terwilliger was seized with the attack he threshed about the house for a time. When discovered he was unconscious and has not gained consciousness since being brought to the hospital. The blood on the floor came from a cut on the nose.

An investigation through the house led the authorities to believe that Terwilliger had been in bed when he was seized with the attack as a desk upstairs was overturned. Apparently he arose from the bed as he was still unclothed when found. An effort to get downstairs and probably summon aid appeared to have been his next move for the authorities found a place where he had gripped the stair rail near the top and apparently the rail broke under the strain and Terwilliger may have fallen down stairs and at that time suffered the injury to his nose. Portions of the broken rail were found at the foot of the steps.

Some time later Terwilliger made his way about the lower floor for the lower floor was in great disorder. When found he lay on the floor in the dining room near a couch which he apparently had attempted to reach.

On arrival of the coroner and Trooper it was found that Terwilliger was not dead but unconscious and Dr. H. E. Voss of Wallkill was summoned. It was then learned that Terwilliger had suffered an epileptic fit. He was brought to the Kingston Hospital about 11 o'clock Saturday and up until this morning was still unconscious.

Municipal Bankruptcy Act Unconstitutional

Washington, May 29 (AP)—The 1934 Municipal Bankruptcy Act, passed by a New Deal Congress, was held unconstitutional today by the Supreme Court.

The five to four decision, delivered by Justice McReynolds, concluded:

"The challenge to the validity of the statute must be sustained."

Justice Cardozo, Chief Justice Hughes, and Justices Brandeis and Stone asserted that "the statute is constitutional."

The majority differed with a ruling by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the legislation.

The law was challenged by certain bondholders of the Cameron county, Texas, water improvement district number one.

They contended the act took property without due process of law and violated states rights.

The legislation was intended to aid cities, counties and other political subdivisions reduce their indebtedness through federal bankruptcy courts.

Illuminating Gas Kills Aged Woman

Mrs. Malvira Lane, 83, of 15 Downs Street, Found Dead in Bed by Her Granddaughter, Mrs. Baldwin—Aged Woman Had Accidentally Turned on Gas Jet Near Her Bed.

Mrs. Malvira Lane, 83, of 15 Downs street, was found dead in bed about 9:30 o'clock this morning by her granddaughter, Mrs. Pauline Baldwin, with whom she made her home. Death was due to gas asphyxiation. Coroner Leston H. DuBois of New Paltz, who was called, after an examination gave his verdict as accidental death by gas poisoning.

According to the story as learned by the coroner the aged woman was last seen alive about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. It is thought that during the night she had arisen to look out of her bedroom window and in doing so her elbow had come into contact with the cock on the gas jet, which furnished illumination at night. This gas cock turned easily and the elderly woman evidently did not notice that she had turned on the gas jet.

When Mrs. Baldwin did not hear Mrs. Lane stirring around in the morning she prepared her breakfast and placing it on a tray went to the bedroom. As she opened the bedroom door she was met by the heavy odor of illuminating gas.

She promptly called the police department and Dr. John Krom. The police also called the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Company who rushed a rescue crew with an inhalator to the house.

Efforts to revive the woman proved futile and Dr. Krom estimated that she had been dead about 8 hours.

Officers Camp and Soper in one of the radio cars responded to a radio call and hurried to the house.

Coroner DuBois after completing his investigation ordered the body turned over to Undertaker Victor N. Lasher of Woodstock.

Mrs. Lane is survived by one son, Fanton Lane of Willow.

Sunday evening at the association's banquet in the Governor Clinton Hotel, Albert Goldman, postmaster of New York city, as guest speaker, said national business is growing, using to illustrate the increase in post office business, and John J. Besides Messrs. Goldman and Barrett, others who spoke were Mary DeWitt, national president of the Ladies' Auxiliary; Joseph J. Smith, president of the organization in New York; Walter J. Ferris, president of the New York state branch; Jesse Snyder, president of the Pennsylvania group; Edward Lang, past president of the New Jersey branch; William T. Kraft, Kingston postmaster, who was toastmaster.

Charles Lord, president of the Kingston union, opened the speakers' program, and Anthony Arena, chairman of the committee on arrangements, was among those introduced to the group.

Postmaster General Farley, who was unable to accept an invitation to attend, expressed his regrets in a telegram, which Postmaster Kraft read to the assemblage. He extended best wishes for the success of the convention.

"We are on the right road to prosperity," Postmaster Goldman told the postal employes, when he was introduced. He said last year's business in New York city amounted to $64,000,000, and predicted this year's would reach the $70,000,000 mark.

The banquet room resounded with applause when the speaker said "Postmaster General Farley has been the guiding spirit behind the increase of business in the post office department"; and there was another salvo when he credited President Roosevelt's national policies as a boon to the national business as well as to the postal system.

Speaking of increased business in his own department, Goldman said, "If our business increases then you must understand that somebody else is also doing better business." Then he added, "Under the guidance of our national president, it will continue to grow better."

Mr. Goldman's department employs 28,000, a number that "would make a city almost as large as Kingston." This group represents all races and creeds, he said, commending the workers for their spirit of cooperation and "their spirit of service and religious dealings with

Mrs. Dulcie Holt Ross Of Port Ewen Drowned At Tucker's Beach

Mrs. Clara Tinnie Finds Note Stating That Mrs. Ross Could Be Found at Beach Below Hill in Port Ewen.

WAS DESPONDENT

Had Been in Ill Health for Some Time and She Had Hinted at Suicide.

Mrs. Dulcie Holt Ross of Port Ewen, about 62 years of age, committed suicide Sunday by drowning at Tucker's Beach off Port Ewen. Mrs. Ross, who resided on Broadway in Port Ewen, had been in ill health for some time and had been treated for heart trouble by Dr. F. L. Eastman of this city. Mrs. Ross apparently believed she was becoming worse and had been despondent for some time. A neighbor stated that a couple of days ago she had hinted at suicide. The body was discovered about 1:30 o'clock Sunday by neighbors who had been summoned when Clara Tinnie, who resides near the Ross home, went to the Ross home and found a note there stating that Mrs. Ross would be found at Tucker's Beach.

Coroner Leston DuBois of New Paltz was summoned when the body was found and gave as his verdict, "suicide by drowning." The body had been in the water only a couple of hours when recovered.

Mrs Roos resided alone in the large house on Broadway in the village. Mrs. Clara Tinnie, who lives a few doors away and who knew of Mrs. Roes' illness, visited her about 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning. At the time Mrs. Ross appeared to be very despondent. After Mrs. Tinnie had attempted to cheer up the ill woman she left after telling Mrs. Ross that she would return at noon with lunch. She had been in the habit of bringing in meals.

At noon Mrs. Tinnie returned and there found a note stating that Mrs. Ross could be found at Tucker's Beach, which is below the hill in Port Ewen on the Hudson river. Since Mrs. Ross had mentioned a couple of days ago that she would do away with herself, Mrs. Tinnie summoned the aid of Robert Clark and Charles Lewis and then went to the beach where they discovered Mrs. Ross's hat on the shore, and the body was found a short distance off shore in the water floating. The fact that the body was floating indicated that Mrs. Ross had probably died when she struck the water.

The body was secured by the two young men and Sergeant John Lockhart, Corporal Norman Baker, Troopers L. Baker, Klein and Senecal responded to a summons, and Coroner Leston DuBois was also summoned when the body was located.

After investigating the case Coroner DuBois rendered his verdict of suicide. The body was taken in charge of Coroner DuBois and removed to his undertaking parlors in New Paltz.

Mrs. Ross is survived by a nephew, Bernard Holt, of Union City, N. J., an engineer on the West Shore Railroad. Coroner DuBois notified the nephew and funeral arrangements will be made on his arrival here. Mr. DuBois said that he did not know whether there were other surviving nephews or not until he interviewed Mr. Holt.

Kingston Business Men Want Park-O-Meters Installed in The Uptown Business Section

'EXECUTIONER' FACES COURT

Members of Association Believe That System Will Very Materially Relieve The Present Parking Problem Confronting City.

RECOMMEND AREA

Fair, Wall and John Streets Areas For Installing Meters Recommended by the Merchants.

At a meeting of the members of the Kingston Business Men's Association held this morning at Flanagan's store the members of the association unanimously decided to ask for an installation of the Park-o-meters in the uptown business section in the belief that it would very materially relieve the present parking problem which confronts the city.

Several members of the association spoke favorably of the operation of the parking meters in other cities and at the conclusion of the meeting a resolution endorsing the installation was drawn up and forwarded to the mayor, requesting that the parking meters be installed.

The area in which the meters will be installed as recommended by the merchants will be Fair street from Main street to the parking grounds at the Rose & Gorman store, Wall street between Main street and North Front street and John street from Clinton avenue to Crown street.

Those at the meeting expressed the idea that the installation of the meters would correct the parking problem to a material degree and the decision to request the city to have them installed was unanimous.

Among those who spoke of the operaton of the meters in other cities was Mr. Kearney who told of the successful operation of the meters in Oklahoma City where they were first tried out. A. E. Rose and Mr. Hall spoke of the satisfaction which the installation was giving in St. Petersburg, Florida, and E. Frank Flanagan. Mr. Hymes and R. Cohen also told of the satisfaction which the meters gave in places where they had witnessed the operation.

What type of meters will be installed will remain for the city officials to decide. The action of the merchants was simply a request that the city have them installed. There are several companies manufacturing the meters but the general operation is about the same.

Meters are installed along the business streets and a car operator desiring to park drives up to the space and drops a nickel in the meter. The meters are set to meet the local traffic regulations, which in the case of Kingston is a one hour parking time. A parker may park in the place for an hour. When the nickel is dropped in the meter a hand begins to move forward and when the hour time is up a red flag appears to notify the traffic officer that the parking time has expired.

In the event a driver wishes to park for a shorter time than an hour he drops a nickel in the machine, provided he does not find a meter which still has time to go. When a parker fails to use up his full hour time and leaves the parking space the remaining time on the meter may be used by some subsequent parker who may use up the unexpired time. It is expected that for a person who wishes to merely stop for a few moments to pick up a parcel there will be unused time on some meter nearby which may be used for that purpose.

What type of meter is installed by the city is not known but the usual type costs $60 with an allowance of $2 to the city install. When the $58 price has been collected by the manufacturers of the meter the meter becomes the property of the municipality and the revenue from then on may be used to pay the salary of an officer whose duty it is to check the meters and see that no one parks without dropping the proper fare. The revenue is expected to pay for the cost of such a traffic officer whose duty will be to watch the meters for overtime parkers.

Three Investigations to Probe "Black Legion" and Activities

Coroner Finds No Culpable Negligence In Bush Death Case

Coroner Howard B. Humiston of Kerhonkson has handed up his decision in the Henry Bush death case. Bush was fatally injured last September 7, near the Log Cabin at Allaben, but the cause of the injuries were never clearly defined. Bush had been at the Log Cabin during the evening and at the inquest it was stated he had been drinking.

Later a truck drove up to the Chester Dutcher place at Allaben and told Mr. and Mrs. Dutcher that Bush had been taken home injured by the men in the truck. They told the Dutchers that Bush had been left on his porch by the men who took him home. When the members of the Dutcher family went to the house where Bush lived alone they found him on the porch seriously injured and unable to make any definite statement as to how he was hurt. He died after being brought to the Kingston Hospital.

Coroner Humiston held an inquest on November 15, 1935, and at that time it appeared that three men had brought the injured man home in a truck and left him and stopped at the Dutcher house to notify the Dutcher family. When troopers arrived at the scene of the accident no one was there. It developed that a truck of William R. Sanford of Dunraven and driven by Bruce Cowan had been following another truck from West Hurley. When they arrived near the Log Cabin they saw a man on the pavement. An attempt was made to stop according to the driver but it was not possible to stop before the man on the road was struck. The Marian Bellows truck which was the truck ahead had already stopped. The driver of that truck said he had seen the body on the west side of the road and had stopped to go back and notify the truck which was following to look out for the man but had been unable to stop the truck before it reached the man. The driver of the Bellows truck said he heard a man scream as the Sanford truck passed the body but he could not say the truck struck the man.

None of the drivers or occupants of the trucks admitted striking the man. A car which had passed just before the trucks came along contained several people and they testified a man, apparently intoxicated, had been on the road to the east when the car passed and that was a short distance from the scene of the accident.

Coroner Humiston in his decision stated that after an exhaustive examination and investigation he has

Detroit, May 25 (AP)—At least three investigations were in progress today of the Black Legion which, State Police Captain I. H. Marmon said he had been informed, may have been responsible for 50 deaths in Michigan.

In Detroit, police sought to link the sinister hooded order with the death of Rudolph J. Anderson, 40 from a gunshot wound last December. A rifle lay near the body in Anderson's parked automobile, and the death was recorded as a suicide.

Capt. Marmon said he was told that the Black Legion made its "executions" appear as suicides.

Anderson was a fellow employe of Harvey Davis, a "colonel" in the order, and Dayton Dean, who are held in connection with the fatal shooting of Charles A. Poole, on May 12.

Harry Colburn, chief investigator for Wayne County Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, said he was informed the Black Legion had 135,000 members in Michigan, all armed, that it refused to countenance withdrawals, and boasted it had "no ex-members except those that are six feet under."

John Doe Inquiry

In Jackson, Justice of the Peace Ernest J. Roger opened a "John Doe" inquiry into the statements of Mrs. Maida Every and her son, Ralph, 20, that their husband and father, Paul Every, 42, was taken from his home and flogged last February because he attempted to resign from the Black Legion. He died April 14, of diabetes and heart disease.

Mrs. Every said Ray Ernest, like her husband a state prison guard, was in the party that seized Every. Ernest was detained on a charge of possessing illegal weapons after a raid on his home disclosed several weapons, ammunition, a hood and robe bearing the skull and crossbones insignia of the Black Legion, a whipping strap, and literature describing an organization referred to only as the "L. O. T. P."

Warden Harry H. Jackson, of the state prison, suspended Ernest yesterday.

Also under investigation was the death of Garfield Wolfe, 45, an oil prospector, in 1932. He was found dead at a roadside near Napoleon, Mich., of a ruptured spleen, and state police said his acquaintances included several men now reported of membership in the Black Legion.

Jackson, Mich., May 25 (AP).—The oath of the "Black Legion," seized by state police with other literature at the home of Ray Ernest, southern Michigan prison guard, required new members to give their first allegiance to the "Legion." Prosecutor Owen Dudley, of Jackson county, said the literature indicated Ernest was a "brigadier general" of the organization.

According to the literature, some

Socialist Party in Split, Rights Organize

Cleveland, May 25 (AP).—Once more, the Socialist party is split.

The "Old Guard" of New York—the faction of Rightists led for years by the late Morris Hillquit and now by Louis Waldman—set forth today to organize a new Marxist party, and only in New York but on a national basis.

The split came yesterday after the national convention of the Socialist party stood by its national executive committee and the leadership of Norman Thomas, turned down the "Old Guard" and seated the Thomas Leftist delegation from New York.

All compromise efforts were futile. The "Old Guard" had turned its back on compromise, especially on the proposal that the 44 seats be divided on the basis of the proportional vote in the April primary in New York, in which the Leftists defeated the "Old Guard" and gained control of the city and state committees.

While the convention, after wrangling for two days over the New York dispute, belatedly got down to drafting its platform and discussing candidates, the "Old Guard" met in conference with the Rightwing forces of other states.

Quickly, a committee, with Waldman as chairman, was formed to draft the plans for the new party, select a name and pick a provisional executive committee.

In New York, the party will probably be organized before July and it intends to enter the fall campaign with a state ticket.

"The 'Old Guard' leaders made no predictions of what membership they could muster. Convention leaders from other states, including Thomas, minimized the effect outside of New York state. And, as concerns New York state, Thomas said "We will be better off with them out of the party, even with their newspapers and their organization, than to have them continue the sabotage from within."

Danish Farmer Government

The farmers in Denmark are considered among the very best and most efficient in the world, and the Farmer party is in majority in the government, so whenever anything is found to be harmful to agriculture, the government immediately goes after that something, until it is fully destroyed or eliminated, according to a writer in the Washington Star. Now, over there, the starling is considered a very useful bird by all farmers and by everybody else, and is a commonly loved bird, and in all gardens are hung bird-houses for the starlings, to attract them to the farms and gardens. The starling lives mainly on bugs, larvae, and all harmful insects, and destroys yearly billions of these. When cattle are stung by the gadfly, who deposit their eggs under the hide of the cattle, one may see the starlings sitting on the backs of the cattle, pulling out the harmful larvae. The starling does not eat grain or seed, as does the sparrow.

Commencement

The word commencement, denoting "the celebration of the completion of an academic course by graduates, when degrees or diplomas are publicly conferred and the students have qualified to commence the higher studies or business to which they have been advanced," has been in use for more than five centuries.

In 1387, John de Trevisa, in his translation of the earlier works of Ranulph Higden, wrote: "By a statute of the universite of Oxenford when eny man is i-congyed (licensed) there to commence in eny faculte he schal not spende at his commencement passynge thre thowsand of grootes turonens." The value of the Tournay groat of that period was less than that of the English groat of the same period, or less than fourpence.—Literary Digest.

How Mother's Day Began

Credit for the originator of Mother's day is usually given to Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia. She began her efforts in 1906, shortly after the death of her own mother, to urge that a day be set apart "in honor of the best of mothers, your own." She formed the Mother's Day association, addressed meetings, and campaigned among conventions and church gatherings, and finally the day was fixed in 1908 as the second Sunday in May.

In 1913 Miss Jarvis got the Pennsylvania legislature to designate the first official Mother's day. In the spring of 1914 the movement reached congress, where an unhesitant majority went on record in endorsement of the observance.

Visit White Pygmies

A race of white pygmies is described by three Frenchmen who landed at Marseilles, after an expedition into the heart of Africa. These three explorers were sent by a Paris newspaper to investigate the lives of these strange people. They landed at Dakar, Senegal, traveled inland via Bamako and Gao to the Secondea regions and finally reached the almost unknown tract of country where the white pygmies live. The white pygmies are a very primitive race about three feet high with enormous heads. They keep themselves strictly apart from other tribes and live by hunting elephants and antelopes.

Winter duststorms often cause "brown" snowfall in regions far distant. By analyzing the dust, soil chemists of the United States Department of Agriculture sometimes are able to determine the region in which it originated. They found that dust in the "brown" snow, which fell in February on New Hampshire and Vermont, probably got its start in Oklahoma, Texas or Kansas.

REPUBLICAN Off-Guard

GUBANATORIAL INFORMALITY

Alf M. Landon, whose balancing of the Kansas budget first brought him recognition as a possible Republican presidential nominee, likes plain food and plain clothes and has a ready smile for most occasions.

Traditions Are Shattered As Republicans Lay Plans For Hard-Driving Campaign

By BYRON PRICE

(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Prospects of a lively, hard-driving campaign are further confirmed by the plan of various Republican leaders to "notify" their presidential nominee immediately after the Cleveland convention.

Considering all of the circumstances, such a plan could only have had one origin. It unquestionably arose from a widespread conviction among Republican strategists that the party's best hope of winning lay in a vigorous, sustained attack, started as early as possible.

In politics, nothing is more deadly than anti-climax. Once formally under way, a campaign needs to be kept moving with increased momentum right up to election day. The old tradition of a notification ceremony around mid-August rested on a belief in both parties that any campaign which started too soon would lag, leaving candidates and voters weary of it before the finish.

The Democrats broke away from that tradition four years ago. Now the Republican chieftains are proposing that their party do the same, indicating they hope to keep their heavy artillery going full blast from June to November.

Plan Adds Simplicity

Whatever the political wisdom of such a course, it certainly can be said that an immediate notification tends to simplify campaign procedure.

The old system involved a good many fictions, and resulted in many anomolies. From June to August a nominee was left officially, although not actually, on the loose. He was the designated leader of his party, yet he had not been invested with leadership.

Everybody knew that such a candidate was going ahead planning his campaign, even though he wasn't supposed to know anything about his nomination. The situation developed its own lore of wit and humor dealing with the "surprise party" notification, and the sudden appearance of the astonished nominee, with a carefully prepared speech in his pocket.

Nevertheless, there are those who for sentimental or other reasons still like the ceremonial aspects of the delayed notification. There are others who doubt the wisdom of opening the campaign so soon. It probably will be for the nominee himself to make the final decision.

Democrats Have Precedent

No one was surprised at the decision of the Democrats to hold their ceremony immediately after the convention at Philadelphia, nor can that development be regarded as carrying the same significance which attaches to the proposal of the Republicans.

It was Mr. Roosevelt who brushed aside the old precedent in 1928, by hastening to Chicago and accepting the party standard in the presence of the delegates who nominated him. It could not be supposed that he would do otherwise this year.

With the Republicans it is different. Breaking precedents is not the keynote of their campaign; in fact, a large part of the Republican attack rests on an accusation that Mr. Roosevelt has broken too many. Besides, they run the risk of being charged with trying to imitate the Democrats.

So the reasons which have caused the Republican plan to progress as far as it has must have been quite appealing. Of course it remains to be definitely decided whether an early notification actually is to take place, but the build-up already in evidence proves the eagerness of important elements in the party to let precedent and all other considerations go by the board, and start the fireworks.

Garden Party at St. Ursula Academy

A special feature of the Garden Party, which will be held at the Academy of St. Ursula on Wednesday afternoon and evening of this week, will be a display of the handiwork, including basketry, weaving and needlework of the patients of the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital. This is the first time that the patients of the hospital have shown their work at St. Ursula's and it is hoped that the patronage of the booth will be large. The display is in charge of Mrs. Frederic Holcomb, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the hospital.

In order that the mothers may attend the party in the afternoon without having the responsibility of caring for their children, a play hour has been arranged, beginning at 3 o'clock. Here the children will enjoy games and the companionship of their young friends under the guidance of the older students and teachers of the Academy.

The garden party will divide itself into three parts, an afternoon bridge, beginning at 2 o'clock; a supper, which, if the weather is nice, will be served at tables on the lawn, beginning at 5:30 o'clock, and an evening card party, at which both bridge and pinochle will be played, beginning at 8:15 o'clock. Players are asked to furnish their own cards. Reservations for the afternoon bridge may be made by calling Mrs. Walter J. Miller and for the evening with Mrs. Julia Kane.

Bishop C. K. Gilbert Confirmed Class at St. John's Church

A large congregation filled St. John's Episcopal Church on Albany avenue on Sunday at the 10:45 o'clock service, when the Right Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, Suffragan Bishop of the Diocese of New York, confirmed a class of twenty-one candidates. Those confirmed were:

Edith May Babcock, Harry John Beatty, John Van Etten Brinnier, Anne De la Vergne, Jeanne Marie De la Vergne, Charles Henry Diehl, Edith Ritch Ellison, Abigail Smith Ellison, Doris Hoffman Fronefield, Dorothy Voorhis Fronefield, Kenneth Michael Hughes, Jessie Margaret Kapreilian, Eugene Pairo Mac Connell, Maren Seabolt Mac Connell, Eugene Pairo Mac Connell, Jr., John Warren Mac Connell, Helen Marie Connor, Pauline Margaret Smith, Pauline Anne Smith, Roberta Kathryn Tranker, Carleton La Vergne Williams.

The entire congregation joined with the confirmation class in confirming the vows they took or their sponsors took for them in baptism.

After the laying on of hands by Bishop Gilbert, he addressed those who had been confirmed, yet what he said to them made a profound impression on the older members of the congregation as did the bishop's sincerity, simplicity and great kindliness. He said he knew that such a splendid class was deeply concerned in the step they were about to take and that it meant a great deal to them to join the fellowship of those who had already publicly promised their allegiance to Jesus Christ. He felt that they had realized the responsibility of taking their places beside those who had asked them to come into that fellowship.

But Bishop Gilbert laid an equally heavy weight of responsibility upon those already members of the church, toward those just confirmed, especially the younger members of the class, all of whom of their own choice, eager and alert had come to the undertaking of their part in the life work of their church, their parish, the world. Of the older people Bishop Gilbert asked "What kind of a church are you asking these young people to come into? What is its spirit, what is its temper, what the atmosphere in which they will grow up to fulfill their life's destiny?" The attitude toward all those questions, was the responsibility of those already communicants of the church to help create a spiritual environment for them to grow in so that they would be ready to take their places in the world as well as in their own community.

Bishop Gilbert admitted that the conditions and situations in the world today which are being passed on to our children offer grave and perplexing problems for the world today is very unfriendly to the things of religion, even hostile. They may find this unfriendliness and hostility in the schools and colleges into which they go, a repudiation of the ideas, ideals and purposes taught by their Master, for we all are wondering sometimes if God in His Heaven will ever again prevail. But the bishop told the congregation that we could find consolation in the fact that such conditions had arisen and been overcome before. Way back in the days of the Psalmist there had been just such distress and uncertainty and the hunting for some relief which they always found in the sanctuary of God. Just so today, there is but one sanctuary from all of the distress, misery, uncertainty, and that is close to God, the Father, so that looking up into His face, we may catch some of the glory and promise of the Ascension.

Bishop Gilbert asked his hearers to try to realize the thoughts and emotions of those few followers of Christ after they saw Him ascend from their sight and knew with consternation and dismay that their incomparable friend and leader had left them alone to carry on the great work He had left them to do. They had only the nebulous, vague promise that in due time they would receive power from on high. But they kept close together and waited until something transforming did happen, and strength, courage, power were given to those simple Galilean working men who instituted the church of the living Christ. As they found the power from on high, the faith, the sacrificial love and the devotion which enabled them to do what their heavenly Father asked them to do, and to live the life they were required to live, so in God's house today, we may find the same power. The bishop bade them to come and in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, find their small energies and efforts becoming something bewildering in their new power and strength that would give them courage today as in all time past.

Bishop Gilbert closed by urging all present to a higher resolve to love the very place which was their church and to claim for themselves there that closer communion with Christ and God, the Father that would make them know that God was greatly concerned in each of their lives and was waiting to flood those lives with consecrating power from on high.

The candidates received from the Bishop their certificates and a little book. In addition, Phyllis Hart and Vera Mackey of the Sunday school, each received a gift from their rector, the Rev. W. Fosnell Kemper, who presented the class for confirmation to Bishop Gilbert, in recognition of their having perfectly answered all of the questions found in the catechism, the gifts being presented by the bishop who congratulated them both.

At the 8 o'clock communion service next Sunday morning, the entire confirmation class, in a body, will receive their first communion on Whitsunday, the day the church throughout the world observes by the celebration of the Holy Communion in remembrance of the first Whitsunday when the Holy Ghost came upon those men to whom it was given to carry forward the teachings and sacrament of Jesus Christ, their Master.

TO CONDUCT SYMPHONY HERE

ANDRE POLAH, FAMED CONDUCTOR

The WPA Syracuse Symphony will make its first appearance in Kingston, June 3, playing at the Municipal Auditorium with Andre Polah, famed conductor, wielding the baton.

Mr. Polah, who as a boy of 12 won the much coveted gold medal of the Royal Conservatory of The Hague, and through his striking success as soloist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and similar American organizations, Andre Polah has been a commanding figure among the violin virtuosi.

He served his apprenticeship under Ysaye in Belgium and Massenet in France, and his successive concert appearances in practically every European country before the war demonstrated that a new star had arisen in the musical firmament.

Upon his arrival in America, Mr. Polah rapidly took his place as one of the most brilliant violinists to appear before the public and wherever he has been engaged he has impressed his audiences and critics alike with his splendid musicianship and the fire and passion of his playing.

For three years in Brussells, Mr Polah was assistant to Ysaye giving all of Ysaye's lessons while the master was on his concert tour. He also had his own violin class in Brussels. After touring this country for five seasons, he taught two years in Chicago, two years in Rochester, where he gave several recitals at the home of George Eastman. He later opened his own studio in New York city. In September, 1928, he joined the faculty of Syracuse University as professor of violin and ensemble.

Since taking over the directing of the Syracuse Symphony the fame of the orchestra through Mr. Polah's handling has become nation-wide and it did not take the National Broadcasting Co. long to take advantage of the expertness of the group and put them on a nation-wide chain broadcast.

Mr. Polah will bring the Orchestra to Kingston in connection with the state conference of mayors and is sponsored by the music lovers of Ulster county.

Ten Killed in Upstate Traffic Mishaps Over Week-end, 4 Children

Albany, N. Y., May 25 (AP)—Traffic accidents took a toll of 10 lives in upstate New York during the week-end, one less than last week. Four of the victims were children and three women.

Miss Norine Hartnett, 20, of Lackawanna died when the automobile in which she was riding plunged into the harbor at Buffalo and Mrs. Ambye Henderson, 48, of Northville, similarly when she lost control of the car she was driving and it careened over an embankment into the Sacandaga river.

Both bodies were recovered

Near Canandaigua, two cars collided head-on killing Mrs. Margaret O. Sackett, 41, of Penn Yan, her son, Homer, Jr., 10, and Mary and Francis Makarainen, aged 10 and nine, both of Ithaca. Three other persons were seriously injured.

Other Victims

Other traffic victims were Marvin M. Scott, 24, of Gloversville, killed when his automobile overturned; Helen Stacknis, 18, of Niagara Falls, killed when the car in which she was riding struck a pole; Lewis Bush, 10, of Walworth, struck by an automobile at Palmyra, and Charles Venator, 73, of Buffalo, struck by a car driven by a border patrolman.

Three youths were drowned. Robert Du[illegible]ee, 21, of Jackson Heights, N. Y., perished when his canoe overturned in Fourth Lake. He was a Colgate senior. Verrill Livergood, 14, of Sodus Center and Irwin Jaeger, 10, of Akron, drowned while playing in ponds.

Makes Appeal

Albany, N. Y., May 25 (AP)—Motor vehicle Commissioner Charles Hartnett appealed for greater safety measures today in announcing that traffic accident deaths in the state during the month of April were less than the toll of the same month last year.

The commissioner said there were 205 persons killed, 21 less than in April, 1935.

"Ten fatal accidents," he said, "resulted from motorists exceeding the speed limit. Nineteen fatal accidents resulted from motorists driving on the wrong side of the road.

"Ten fatal accidents resulted from motorists failing to grant the right of way. If a spirit of courtesy and a willingness to strictly follow safety rules could be instilled, accidents would not occur as the result of failing to give the right of way. . . .

"No person was killed while crossing the street with the signal. On the other hand, 18 fatal accidents occured when pedestrians crossed against the signal, and there were 42 fatal accidents when pedestrians crossed between intersections."

Mental Examination For George Salaky

County Judge Frederick G. Traver has granted an order authorizing a mental examination of George Salaky, Jr., 31, Ulster Heights man who is now in jail under indictment on a charge of murder, first degree, for the shooting of Harry Siegel, 23, also of Ulster Heights on April 2, last.

The order directs that the mental examination be held May 27 at Kingston by Doctors Milton Harrington and Philip R. Lehrman.

Salaky it is charged shot Siegel at a Ulster Heights milk drop when Siegel and his two brothers came with the morning milk. At the time it was stated that Salaky was suffering from some idea that he should protect a young girl in the neighborhood whom he imagined Siegel was too friendly with. The charge of familiarity with the girl it is stated was unfounded and was simply an idea which Salaky had manufactured in his own mind after attending a motion picture, "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" where he witnessed a mountaineer's idea of administering justice.

After the shooting Salaky attempted to drive his car away from the scene after threatening the two young lads who had accompanied their brother. His car became mired in the mud on a back road and he abandoned the car and walked to the Greenfield road where he threw his shot-gun in a creek and went to Ellenville where he was arrested.

POLITICAL TYRANNY

Our country is not immune to such breakdown of free government as we see today in so many other countries, insists A. H Silver of Cleveland, a leading Jewish rabbi.

Biology has nothing to do with it, nor race psychology. It is true that some nations have had a longer experience in self-government than others, and to that extent may resist dictatorship longer than others. But that they are forever safe from it is a dangerous delusion.

The American dictator is likely to be the type of person whom Sinclair Lewis describes—a good-natured, homespun, back-slapping politician with a sense of humor, but shrewd, unscrupulous, inordinately ambitious, half zealot and half charlatan.

The platform of such a faker, he thinks, would be a shrewd mixture of radicalism, jingoism and anti-communism, appealing to all kinds of vague idealists and also to representatives of big business and industry who would expect "protection against reds, labor unions, higher income taxes and all troublesome radicalism." It sounds like an impossible combination. Yet almost every detail reminds us of politicians we know.

How avoid such a possibility? Our strongest defense, argues Rabbi Silver, is "the reformation of our economic life so that the people will have security and a decent standard of living." Along with that he points to our constitutional bulwarks of free speech, free press and free assembly. Only these can fend off political tyranny.

MOUNTAIN CLIMBERS

On April 3, 1933, two British airplanes flew over Mount Everest, but the large climbing expedition of that season failed. Twice, however, the climbers reached a point only 1,000 feet short of the top. This spring another large expedition, again led by Hugh Rutledge, is trying to scale the world's loftiest mountain, and hopes to get to the top before the end of May. Mountain climbing of this sort is as carefully planned as a military expedition. Camps are established at different levels and stocked with everything needed during the long, slow ascent. Seven camps are planned. The last will be pitched at a height of 27,800 feet. The final big push will be made from there, but the last stretch to the peak is a treacherous slope at an angle of 45 degrees.

Mount Everest may be conquered this time, or it may not. In either case the climbers will be fortunate to get down again alive and well, although every successive expedition is better equipped and the men are more experienced than in past efforts. They will surely win one of these times. Usefulness need not be required of such conquests. Some men just have to climb mountains, as others have to explore tropical jungles and polar snows. Without their curiosity, driving energy, courage and endurance, human knowledge of the physical world would still be scant and primitive.

THIS MONTH'S GRADUATES

The high school commencements are under way. Boys and girls, as radiant and starry-eyed as their fathers and mothers before them, are sitting on platforms all over the country, listening to speeches, making idealistic and ambitious orations of their own, grasping diplomas in eager hands. It is a show perennially interesting and moving, because the performers and the audiences are always new, always hopeful, always proud and happy.

Have the youngsters graduating this month and next received the education they need? Are they prepared for life? Can they solve some of the problems which have baffled their elders? Can they think for themselves? Do they read understandingly, express themselves clearly, seek truth honestly?

Dr. Alexis Carrel says modern men need "above all other things, mental equilibrium, nervous stability, sound judgment, audacity, moral courage and endurance." If our graduating boys and girls lack these things, it is because the teaching and examples of their elders have failed them. Education has been as confused and groping as everything else in the post-war year. But youngsters today are courageous and surprisingly practical. We need not fear for them.

SOLAR BUSINESS CYCLE

Astronomers are turning economists. Dr. Loring B. Andrews of the Harvard observatory, studying the spots on the sun, which are periodic, figures that they will reach their maximum in 1939. Turning back to their last maximum intensity, he finds that it was in 1928, just about the time of our peak prosperity, and wonders if there can really be a connection. Our prosperity, which waned with the sunspots, seems to be growing with them again.

It isn't a new idea. Another astronomer, Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, some years ago noticed a strange parallel between solar and business cycles. A leading American economist has done the same thing. There seems to be a usual lag of about a year between the sunspot maximum and the business maximum. That would bring the peak of our present rising business wave about 1940. Business advisers and stock speculators will doubtless take note accordingly.

There must be still more potency in those solar cyclones—for that's what sunspots are. They seem to run along curiously with rainfall and water levels—which in turn are connected in various ways with the business cycle. It may develop that those sunspots are also responsible for quintuplets and quadruplets; we seem to be coming into a cycle of multiple births.

FOODS AND CONSTIPATION

A statement frequently made is "There's no use telling me not to take medicine to move my bowels because I've been constipated since I was a child".

Why did the patient suffer with constipation as a child?

It will be found that there was little or no instruction from parents on the importance of having regular movements daily, no checking up if the youngster didn't go to the toilet after a breakfast or lunch; and the importance of obeying Nature's call was never drilled into the youngster.

There are therefore a great many people who have formed the "cathartic" habit, honestly believing that there is no other way by which they can get rid of the wastes from the bowel.

Now as there is no "obstruction" in the bowel—growth, kink, or twist—to prevent the wastes moving downward and out of the body, the great majority can secure regular bowel movements with a little thought as to their food, with perhaps, when possible, a little exercise added.

The first fact that the constipated must learn is that they will not become poisoned or seriously ill if there is no bowel movement every day. While there is some absorption into the blood of the waste matter lying in the intestine, some of the "heaviness" or sluggishness felt is due to the weight or pressure of the wastes against the nerve endings lining the bowel.

The habit of going regularly to the toilet at certain definite hours is most important. Having a little stool on which to place the feet bringing the knees closed to the abdomen is a great help in encouraging intestinal movement.

The treatment of constipation by proper foods often given excellent results. The habit of eating coarse foods—vegetables and fruits—is excellent in cases when it is slowness or sluggishness that is causing the constipation. But where the constipation is due to nervous spasm, these coarse foods irritate the irritable or sensitive lining of the intestine and actually increase the degree of spasm. This spasm type of patient should have a smooth, not a rough, diet.

The Xray meal will show whether the intestine is of the sluggish or the spastic type, and so whether rough or smooth foods should be used.

The proper foods, a glass of water before meals, and bending exercises forward, backward and sideways keeping the knees straight, will increase flow of bile. Nature's "purgative", and stimulate the muscular walls of the intestine to push wastes downward and so out of the body.

Nazi Made "General Admiral."

Berlin (AP).—A new naval rank has been created by the appointment of Admiral Erich Raeder as "general admiral." The new title is one step higher than admiral, and one lower than an admiral of the fleet (grand-admiral), which corresponds to field marshal in the army. It equals that of "colonel general" in the land forces, and, like the latter, carries three stars on epaulets and four sleeve stripes.

There are terrible times. People are actually neglecting golf and contract bridge for politics.

Gypsy Weather

BY MARGARET BELL HOUSTON

SYNOPSIS: Dirk Joris has been called home from the bedside of his brother Rupert, ill of pneumonia in the Adirondacks because Martin, chauffeur to Rupert's wife Hope, has heard a man's voice in Hope's room—a voice which Hope denies hearing herself. There is a mystery about the matter Dirk is determined to solve. Hope is ill, is in fear, yet she will not leave her room nor see a doctor. Desperate, Dirk has wired her father, a minister in El Paso from whom Hope admits she is estranged.

Chapter 29

NEW MYSTERY

LOGAN was a quiet man, gifted with what was almost a protective coloring. Looking at him, one could easily fail to notice him. Noticing him, one found him not unlike one's idea—seldom realized—of a country parson.

Dinwiddie, his younger companion, was stocky and muscled, and had trained as a boxer. One noticed him inevitably, but his genial smile, and rosy, boyish face were disarming.

Dirk sat talking with them both in the darkened car. They had not wired him in connection with Martin's adventure.

"Though that has its significance," said Logan, "in the light of what's happened since.

"Last night at ten o'clock Dinwiddie and I were sitting here opposite the gates, when some one came down the drive. I couldn't be sure at first that it wasn't a shadow, but it looked like a woman's figure. It seemed to disappear once or twice, and then it came and stood in the open gates, and waved a hand.

"It was just a flash, just a flicker, that wave. No one not looking for it, or watching the gates, could have seen it. A few seconds later a taxi slowed up at the curb, out of range of the lamp there by the delivery-entrance."

"What color was the taxi?" Dirk asked.

"Green. Green and black. The figure that had waved got in without seeming to speak a word. It was Mrs. Joris. She wore a raccoon coat, and a small dark hat. Our instructions were to follow, and we started at once. The taxi went through Yonkers, into Manhattan, along the drive and the ramp. . . ."

"Did you lose it?" asked Dirk.

"We did not. We stayed with it till it stopped at a brownstone in Forty-sixth Street. Here's the number. There's a speak in the basement, called the 'Araby.'"

Dirk knew. It was the house at which Hope had stopped in the green taxi that Monday night.

"The lady got out," said Logan, "and went up the front steps. Pretty soon the door opened and she disappeared inside.

"I had no instructions to go further. I had followed her and I saw the place she went. You hadn't spoken for more evidence than that. But in the light of what had happened the night before, assuming the sort of evidence you might be after, and you being away. . . ."

"You went in, I take it," said Dirk.

"No. I sent Dinwiddie. He put on his telegraph messenger's cap, we fixed up what looked like a telegram. Then we drove down the street a way, and Dinwiddie went back on foot.

DINWIDDIE took up the account. "It was a private house broke up into apartments, two on a floor. I knew that from the bells on the mail-boxes, and the cards under 'em. The Cockspur Billiard Club was on the first floor, and I rung that bell. When the boy from the club opened the door I said, 'Telegram for Strum.' That was a name I'd seen on one of the cards. When the boy grouched, 'You rung our bell,' I said, 'Finger skidded.' He said, 'Third floor, rear.' And I run on up the stair. I knew she wasn't on the first floor.

"I didn't find her on the second either. Nobody answered one door, and I was kinder worried.

"Well, anyhow, the second-floor front was dead, and there was just a crowd of fellers playin' poker in the rear. None of 'em was named Frühlingpfennig."

"Frühlingpfennig was the name on the telegram," Logan explained. "My own invention."

Dirk, who had slight experience with the professional detectives' aversion to a brief tale, said to Dinwiddie.

"Get on, will you?"

"We'll skip the third floor then," said Dinwiddie. "I'd just started up the last flight when I heard somebody behind me on the stair. On the top floor I knocked at the first door I come to, and a voice — a man's voice—said, 'Come in.' Like that. No questions, or nothin'.

"So I opened the door, and there she was—Mrs. Joris. She had off her coat, and she was sittin' on the couch. The man was sittin' beside her, and he had hold of her hand."

"What man?" asked Dirk.

"Well, he looked kinder foreign. He was about my age — around twenty-five or so—and slim, and his dressin' gown was black with gold snakes on it."

"Dragons," said Logan.

"All right. Anyhow, he was surprised when he saw me. He'd thought it was the man behind me, the waiter or whatever it was. He grabbed the telegram out of my hand, and gave the waiter an order . . . in Italian, mostly. There was some English swear-words in it, like he'd run out of Italian ones. And I understood 'Fazzini cocktail.'

"The lady . . Mrs. Joris . . . had gone over to the window, and stood there with her back to us. The window was covered with curtains, and the shades were down. She couldn't see a thing through it, but she stood there like she was lookin' out.

"It was a sort of den where they were . . . battle-axes, and humidors, and sofa-pillows. There was a door leadin' out of it into another room. It was open a ways, and I was tryin' to see through it, when all of a sudden I saw the man had busted open the wire, and was mad as the devil.

"He blazed out, 'This telegram's for. . . .' He couldn't pronounce the name. He hadn't looked at it before he opened it, and he'd spent a good while spellin' out the message it said, 'Willy has mumps,' and was signed, 'Aunt Susy.'

"He jammed it back at me. Mrs. Joris had turned around, and was looking at me. The man said, 'There's no one of that name in the house.' He seemed to know, so I went downstairs, and out."

"WE WAITED across the street," said Logan. "And in exactly half-an-hour Mrs. Joris came out. She looked up and down the street, then stepped into the green cab which had waited for her."

"She was suspicious, of course," said Dirk.

"Of the telegram perhaps," agreed Logan, "but not of our car. She drove straight home, and we followed her. Of course we may assume she had not stayed as long as she had intended. Even so, all things considered, we have evidence of a type."

Logan cleared his throat. The young gentleman did not seem to relish the facts now that they had been brought to him. He remained silent, not moving, till Dinwiddie, who sat with him in the dark tonneau of the car, pulled out a notebook, and turned his flash upon it.

"A list of the people in the house," Logan explained. "We've looked them all up, but it was Fazzini himself she called on, Tony Fazzini. He's the owner of the Araby, and of the house; rents out bachelor-apartments. Lives alone on the top floor . . . that's where she went. . . . and seldom appears in the speak.

"Decent chap, so far as anybody knows. No record. There was a fight once in the Araby, that's all. A brother of Tony's got mad at something somebody said to a lady, and cleaned out the place so fast the police had to come in."

Dirk said, "Fazzini probably has a side-line, whether he's got a record, or not. Looks as if he might be doing a nice little business in blackmail."

"Hardly," said Logan, stung by this aspersion on his thoroughness. "Tony's been there ten years. There'd have been some smell of it."

Logan went on, "Besides, Fazzini's something of a prince in his own world, and it's not the underworld, either. There's a rumor that he comes of a fine old Florentine family, and that Fazzini's not all of his name. It's not as if he were a common wop . . . though one of his brothers is chef in a downtown hotel, and another, the one who cleaned out the Araby, is said to belong to some traveling circus. Which reminds me . . ."

Dirk broke in.

"Do you know this Fazzini when you see him?"

"Oh, yes," Logan replied easily.

"Do you?" Dirk asked Dinwiddie.

"Well, I've seen him. I'm sure this was him."

ANOTHER MINE VICTIM

TALKS TO PARENTS

Too Much At A Time

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

He was very little, so little that his head did not reach the level of the pew backs and his view consequently was limited to the skirts of his mother and sister on either side, and to bare boards before and behind him.

For a while the newness of the experience of going to church kept him quiet. He liked the organ and the singing and the incomprehensible gymnastics in which his elders were indulging. When he grew tired of these novelties he found a rack of books and amused himself by pushing them about.

But a half hour of so narrow an environment was enough. His legs were cramped, he wanted air and space, and still his mother said nothing, and paid no attention to him. He felt small and lonely and shut out. By the end of an hour his mother had ceased to follow the service, and spent the remainder of her time of worship struggling with what seemed to her a very naughty and wilful little boy.

The child was not to blame. It is not possible for a very little child to sit still or keep still through any church service. His attention and interest flag, his muscles tire with the unaccustomed limitations, and if he does not burst out in loud and violent protest, his mother may think herself lucky.

If his mother is devout and loves church, she is training her child in the opposite direction. Church always will bring up unpleasant associations in his mind, and as soon as he is able, he may cease to go.

There come many times when a child cannot be left at home or in charge of a neighbor and must go to church if his mother does. If the mother can persuade herself to leave church as soon as the child grows restless, she will have made a constructive compromise which may one day bear fruit.

Filipinos Endorse Sanitation.

Manila (AP).—The sanitation work in the Philippines promoted by the United States for more than 30 years would be continued under bills to be introduced at the June session of the new national assembly. Measures for water systems in several towns will be backed by arguments that safe drinking water, assuring public health, is an integral part of national defense.

Sundown Stories

Settling Down

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

RIP, the dog, had decided that he would go for a ride in an airplane parked in a field not so very far from Puddle Muddle. From what he thought and from what he had heard he was sure that the plane was one that was going to take up passengers for short flights.

He had waited until the two pilots had fallen asleep while taking a rest beside their ship.

Then he climbed into the plane and settled himself in a compartment where baggage was stowed.

There was quite a good deal of baggage which made Rip all the more certain that the men were going into the business of taking people up for flights. Yes, Rip thought to himself, they needed all this baggage as they would be living around these parts for quite a while—probably the whole summer. Without doubt the luggage held their clothes and maybe a folding tent so they could camp beside their flying machine.

Rip felt very proud of the way he had thought out all these things.

In addition to the baggage—oddly shaped packages that might be anything—he noticed three packs.

Oh, he was discovering one thing after another. What a lot he would be able to tell Christopher Columbus Crow, Top Notch, the rooster, and the others about his discoveries.

He also saw something like a harness. He believed he would put it on and see what it was like.

He looked out and saw that the men still were asleep. This was going to be fun!

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Labor's spokesmen in congress are privately expressing much doubt about salvaging anything of the Guffey coal bill this session. They plan a determined attempt, however.

Immediately after the decision, they set about carving away the parts of the act the supreme court held invalid. It was the court's somewhat tender treatment of the price fixing features in the act which gave them encouragement that something might be saved.

The Guffey act proposed to give mine owners, in conjunction with government and labor, authority to fix the price of coal at a level which would permit a profit to owners and better wages to the miners. A 15% per cent penalty tax per ton was assessed against non-complying owners. Certain guarantees for labor also were to be enforced by the penalty tax.

Price Fixing Not Outlawed

The majority of the court held that the tax was judiously to coerce compliance with the labor phases, and so, out of bounds. In turn, the labor sections also were held invalid. The decision avoided saying, however, that price fixing was taboo.

A few labor minded members of congress thought they could prepare a bill in which coal price fixing could be used to eliminate cutthroat competition in the industry. Their idea, they were prepared to let John L. Lewis and his powerful United Mine Workers see to it that labor got a proper cut out of the price fixed for the coal they mined.

Drafting a new bill employing the price fixing features was only part of the undertaking. Getting it through a congress hungry for adjournment presented a problem that administration leaders appeared to feel was amply tough, if not unwise, in the face of taxes, relief and certain other urgencies.

Miners For Roosevelt

The bill was passed last session, after many delays, under what some considered was a thinly veiled threat from coal miners that it was either a bill or a strike. They got the bill and didn't strike. Subsequently officials of the United Mine Workers said specifically that they were for the reelection of President Roosevelt.

Would the miners raise a new cry immediately to hammer through a substitute? A few observers who recalled the miners' indorsement of Mr. Roosevelt predicted they would not spoil his campaign summer with labor dirndle.

A few New Deal senators have been holding a wet finger in the air and report discovering quite a wind blowing against price fixing legislation. They have found a few spot on two left by NRA back home that they would like to see healed before the price-fixing weapon is used again in the recovery battle.

Fighters, Drunken Driver and Others In Police Court Here

The menu in police court this morning consisted of a varied array of cases ranging from fighters to those arrested on charges of public intoxication. Two auto drivers were also arrested on charges of operating cars with only one headlight and no tail lights. Thirteen cases were brought to the attention of Judge Culloton as a result of the activities of the police department over the week-end.

Oscar Bell, North street negro, who was so intoxicated on Saturday that he collapsed in police court Saturday morning, later in the day had sobered sufficiently to be arraigned and was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail.

Josephine Jones, 24, of 7 West Strand, and Dora Watson, 43, of 59 Hasbrouck avenue, both negroes, were fined $10 each for staging a fist fight on the Strand on Sunday. They were arrested by Special Officer Charles Messinger.

George Gill, 33, of 13 Spring street; Smith Lowry, a negro of 115 Broadway, and William Sweeney, 32, of Phoenicia, all arrested for public intoxication Saturday afternoon on Foxhall avenue, were each fined $3.

His arrest followed a collision between his car and a car driven by Wilson Cummings of Catskill on Hasbrouck avenue. Both cars were damaged and Mrs. Cummings was cut on the leg and over one eye.

Sanity Testimony in Fiorenza Murder Case

New York, May 25 (AP)—A state psychiatrist, called by the defense today at the trial of John Fiorenza, 24-year-old upholsterer's helper, for the slaying of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, swore Fiorenza was regarded as potentially insane three years before the fiction writer was attacked and strangled.

Dr. James Lincoln McCartney, psychiatrist at Elmira Reformatory, in 1933, testified he examined Fiorenza on April 10, 1933, a month after he was committed for grand larceny, and found him narcissistic, suffering from an Oedipus complex, and definitely schizoid.

Henry Klauber, counsel for Fiorenza, called on the psychiatrist in his battle to prove to Judge Charles C. Nott, Jr., and a jury in General Sessions Court, that the youth was irresponsible and therefore should not be sent to the electric chair.

"Florenza", Dr. McCartney said, "was of dull, normal intelligence, deliberate in action, but readily influenced and prone to fall in the path of least resistance.

"He was emotionally unstable, an introvert, and is definitely retarded in psycho-sexual development. He has a very juvenile attitude toward adult sex."

Florenza listened calmly.

"As a child he was nervous and subject to moody spells," Dr. McCartney continued. "He suffered an over attachment to his mother (the Oedipus complex.

"He is schizoid (his personality disintegrates under certain conditions), likes to be by himself and indulge in day dreaming. He is narcissistic (a psychopathic form of vanity), and likes to show off in a childish way."

District Attorney William C. Dodge declared he will show that Florenza is "as sane as I am."

Dodge said he expected four trial days would be spent by prosecution and defense on the mental responsibility of the defendant.

of the questions prospective members were required to answer affirmatively were:

"Will you put this organization above any to which you now belong, ever belonged, or ever hope to?

"Are you willing to take an order and go to your death, if necessary to carry it out?"

Blood Pact

Another was "After a term of service in this organization you may be required to perform some service on a higher plane than ordinary routine night riding. This would require a blood pact. Would you be willing to sign your name in your own blood?"

Text of a lecture to be delivered by a "chaplain" to new members, also in the hands of state police, included these statements:

"You have already signified a desire to cast your fortunes with us. By doing so, remember that our purpose is to tear down, lay waste, despoil and kill our enemies."

The membership oath, final pledge of the organization, included these phrases:

No Mercy

"I will show no mercy, but strike with an avenging arm as long as breath remains.

"I further pledge my heart, my brain, my body and my limbs, never to betray a comrade; that I will submit to all the tortures mankind can inflict, and suffer the most horrible death, rather than reveal a single word of this, my oath.

"Before violating a single clause or implied pledge of this, my obligation, I will pray to an avenging God and an unmerciful devil to tear my heart out and roast it over flames of sulphur; ***.

"That each of my limbs be broken with stones and then cut off by inches that they may be food for the foulest birds of the air; and lastly that my soul be given unto torments that my body be submersed in molten metal and stifled in the flames of hell; and that this punishment may be meted out to me through all eternity."

Young Fascists Would Restore Hapsburgs

Rome, May 25 (AP)—A plain-spoken forecast from the young Fascist press today said Austria was in hands which are apt to err, and declared the only solution is a return to the Hapsburgs.

The statement came from Luigi Saporito, former head of the young Fascist organization, writing in "Roma Fascista," organ of the Fascist University Students' organization.

It was, perhaps, the most outspoken such Italian press pronouncement since the assassination of Austria's chancellor, Engelbert Dollfuss, by Nazis in July, 1934.

If, like most Italian editorials, it reflected government opinion, the article would seem to mean Il Duce does not place much confidence in the government of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, who succeeded the slain Dollfuss.

Albany, N. Y., May 25 (AP)—Governor Lehman "is certain to have to call a special session of the legislature," Senator Thomas C. Desmond Newburgh Republican, predicted in a statement today.

Desmond said the governor "whether he likes it or not" would have to call the session "early this summer."

Social security, county government reform and legislation recommended by the state mortgage commission were mentioned by the senator as possible subjects for consideration.

Russian-English Pact On Naval Plans Gets Under Way in Talks

London, May 25 (AP)—Great Britain and Russia proceeded to a discussion of fundamental issues in their negotiations for a naval agreement today, just after Moscow announced any London limitation of the Soviet Far Eastern fleet must also bind Japan.

One of the principal problems was raised, an authoritative source said, by the Soviet Union's desire to divide its naval undertakings in two spheres—The Far Eastern and the European. The British preferred to treat the Soviet fleet as one unit.

The program for the conversations was settled in a preliminary exchange of views at the first meeting of the conferees last Wednesday, designed to make clear the Soviet attitude toward the London Naval treaty between Britain, the United States and France.

The second session was called for this afternoon at the foreign office, to get down to essentials in the movement for an Anglo-Russian accord to bring the Soviet Union within the limits of the tri-power London treaty.

The conversations arose from a London invitation to Moscow to discuss an agreement for restriction on sizes of individual types of warships and an exchange of information of naval construction in line with the new London treaty.

The Soviet government organ Izvestia declared in Moscow yesterday Russia could not consider an eastern fleet limitation as long as no similar agreement restricted Japan; and therefore the London negotiations could involve only European armaments.

This official statement asserted Russia was attempting to achieve a separate agreement with Japan—thus far, fruitlessly.

Any acceptance of limitation of armaments in European waters, the Soviet government organ said, would be based on an understanding that Germany would enter a similar accord.

Informed London sources said the Soviet insistence on two independent fleets, capable of confronting those of Japan and Germany, might cause difficulties in British negotiations to bring the third Reich also into the London naval accord.

Memorial Services At Kingston Point

The annual memorial services for the sailor and soldier dead were held at Kingston Point Park on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary, No. 53, of Tappen Camp No. 1, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, and were in charge of Mrs. Eugenie A. Flicker. These annual services are held in memory of the sailors and soldiers who lost their lives at sea in the Civil War, the Spanish-American and World War.

Appropriate music was rendered by the Salvation Army Band and addresses were delivered by Mayor C. J. Heiselman, Charles E. Gradwell of Woodstock and the Rev. Goodrich Gates, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

The ceremony of strewing flowers on the waters of the Hudson river was most impressive. The Rev. Arthur S. Cole, of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, offered the invocation and closed the services with pronouncing the benediction.

Recitations were given by Miss Marge Gaynor, Miss Madeline Smith, Miss Muriel Smith and Miss Dorothy Smith.

Mrs. Raymond Rignall and Raymond DuBois rendered vocal solos.

SUSPECT IN FINE BUSH BANK THEFT EXONERATED.

John "Blubber" Sheehan, who was arrested in New York city on Tuesday on suspicion of complicity in the $14,000 Fine Bush bank robbery, was released from custody on Saturday after the police had satisfied themselves of his innocence. Sheehan, who had protested his innocence since his arrest, was arraigned before Magistrate Samuel Katz in West Side Court in New York, and was released by the magistrate. Information furnished by Abe Feinberg of Tuttletown was responsible for Sheehan's arrest, when Feinberg identified Sheehan as the man who approached him several days before the robbery and asked him to provide lodging for two strangers.

been unable to determine the person or persons who struck the man and says the evidence at the inquest, "fails to disclose to my satisfaction that a crime has been committed, or that any persons have been guilty of that degree of culpable negligence as could warrant my recommendation of further criminal action in the matter."

The decision further states, "an unusual feature of this case lies in the fact that several of those who assumed charge of the injured man prior to his death, behaved in such fashion as to justify strong suspicion as to the extent of their knowledge of the facts. Such suspicion was not more readily allayed by the subsequent inconsistent statements made by those persons. Nor are such persons to be commended for their conduct in shifting, at the earliest possible time, the duty to care for the injured man. Their acts indicated little of that degree of solicitude for the welfare of others that one would expect under all circumstances. However suspicion and a natural revulsion toward the persons involved is insufficient to justify a further expensive and fruitless criminal proceeding. How the fatal injuries were received by deceased and by whom inflicted, is shrouded with doubt which apparently cannot be resolved."

Rotary Boys' Club Have a Fine Time at West Point Saturday

The fourth annual West Point trip of the Rotary Boys' Club was held Saturday and was greatly enjoyed by a group of 44 boys, who were accompanied by Harry Edson, chairman of the boys' committee of Rotary, John Egan, who put up a splendid feed for the party, the Rev. C. E. Brown, Al Schmid, James E. Loughran, official photographer and N. H. Fuller, boys' work secretary at the Y.

The party left the Y at 11:15 and reached West Point in time for the dress parade. Other activities enjoyed were the ball game, won by Maryland University, 19-5, lacrosse and tennis matches and the track meet between Army and Penn State. Army won the meet although Penn State took 8 out of 14 first places. Two new Army records were set—Layne of Army took the 220 in 21.2 and Sanborn, also of Army, won the javelin throw at 204 feet six inches.

A stop was made at a picnic ground on the way home and the fine lunch prepared by Mr. Egan was greatly enjoyed. The party arrived home about 7 p. m.

BLEEFELD DEAD, WAS IN WENDEL KIDNAP CASE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 25 (AP)—Rheumatism and a heart ailment aggravated by worry over his implication in the Wendel kidnaping case was blamed today by the family of Harry Bleefeld, 61, for his death. Bleefeld, a retired cotton goods broker, in whose home Paul Wendel, a disbarred Trenton, N. J., lawyer, declared he was tortured into a "confession," which he later repudiated, of the Lindbergh kidnaping, died last night at Kings County Hospital.

Post Office Clerks Conclude Convention

their occupation which puts service above self."

John J. Barrett, national president of the group, traced the history of the organization from its inception 55 years ago, saying he thought the department never was better represented by more competent officials. Then he cautioned the members not to be over-confident in their prosperity.

Danger of Communism.

"The danger of Communism has crept into the post office service," he said, then cautioned: "But wherever that demon Communism shows its head, you must remember that it is your duty to keep this ship of ours on even keel."

"Taxpayers are crying from the housetops," said Mr. Barrett, "that taxes are too high. We all know that taxes are high and they must be paid, but some of us never stop to think what might have happened had not this money been spent."

About big corporations and their policy of cutting salaries as the first means of economy, the speaker reminded the assemblage that the government was a big corporation and that they should "build up reserve to take care of what might happen next year or some time in the future." His challenge to the association was "see that the men are properly organized for we all owe allegiance only to our government and to ourselves. We shall never at any time divide that allegiance with anyone."

A" federal employes are better off than they ever have been in the history of their existence," said Mr. Barrett, praising the National Legislative Council of Federal Employes Organization for the efforts it put forth for restoration of former salary cuts.

Only 65 per cent of all the postal employes are members of the organization, Mr. Barrett reminded his listeners, telling and urging them to go after the other 35 per cent, who enjoy the benefits that the union brings about but expend no effort toward obtaining them. He referred to the 35 per cent class as "parasites." "Hold what we have and see if we can't get a little more of what we need," were his concluding words.

Pleased With Kingston.

The speakers all praised the local group for the way it handled preparations for the convention, and said they were well pleased with Kingston as a convention city. National President Barrett and State President Ferris extended special congratulations to Postmaster William Kraft and the Kingston union for their spirit of hospitality and efforts to make the convention a success.

Personal greetings from the post office officials at Washington were extended by H. C. Wyman, of the Division of Post Office Service at the capital of the United States. All the men engaged in running the postal service are experienced and never has the department been in better hands, was his opinion.

Sunday morning the New York State Branch of the United National Association of Post Office Clerks met for its first business session and was welcomed by Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman, Postmaster William R. Kraft and Charles Lord, president of the local union. Walter Ferris, president of the New York State Branch, presided.

New York, May 25 (AP)—Herbert Lloyd, former vaudeville headliner, who was said to have played before King Edward VII of England and King Oscar II of Sweden, died last night. He was 62. Promissory Note Action Taken Up

An action on promissory note brought by The Citizens National Bank of Orange, Va., against James O. Winston was taken up in Supreme Court for trial this morning. Michael Nardone appeared for plaintiff and Augustus Shufeldt for the defense.

Plaintiffs claim that in 1929 a note was given by Mr. Winston through Walter Holliday, vice-president of the American Bank and Trust Company of Richmond, Va., and that at the time 300 shares of American Bank and Trust Company of Richmond was given as collateral. There were renewals and the action now on trial is to recover under the renewal note given April 1, 1932. The amount sued for is $9,726.11. Plaintiffs claim the defendant defaulted on the note and that the bank stock which was given as collateral is worthless because of the failure of ehe Richmond bank.

Defendant claims that the note has been satisfied because the Citizens' National Bank of Orange has taken the collateral and that the defendant thereby has satisfied in full the debt through the transfer of the stock.

Mr. Holladay testified that Mr. Winston and he had been friends of long standing and that when Mr. Winston asked for a loan on a note and offered the American Bank and Trust Company of Richmond as collateral he negotiated the loan with the Orange bank because the Richmond bank could not take as collateral its own stock.

Plaintiffs claim the stock given as collateral is now worthless and seek to recover for the amount of the note.

Action for Personal Injuries in Court

A motion was made this morning before Justice Foster in Supreme Court for examination before trial of three defendants in an action brought by William C. Davis and another against United Van Service and others, an action for personal injuries.

Francis T. Murray moved to ran order for the examination on behalf of the plaintiff. The action arose from a motor car collision in which a truck and trailer of the defendant corporation was involved. The complaint alleges that the truck was owned by three defendants, two of whom are corporations. The fourth defendant was the driver of the truck. The corporations deny that Moore, the driver, operated the truck with their permission and deny ownership. The third defendant, an individual, denies that the car was operated with her consent but admits ownership. Moore, who drove the truck is the fourth defendant.

Counsel for the defense stated that the moving papers had been received Saturday and he was not prepared to argue the motion. Argument was postponed.

Stenographer's Desk Altered and Raised

The stenographer's desk in the new court room has been altered and raised so that the court stenographer now sits on the same elevation as the witness box, making it easier to hear testimony given by witnesses. By the rearrangement the court stenographer faces the counsel table beside being much closer to the witness chair.

Prior to the alteration of the stenographer's desk it was frequently impossible for the stenographer to hear testimony given by witnesses because of the fact that the witness faced the counsel table and the stenographer's desk was to the left and considerably lower. The new arrangement was tried out at the present trial term of supreme court.

SPEED UP TESTIMONY IN PROSTITUTION ACTIONS

New York, May 25 (AP)—Testimony that the powers behind New York's prostitution syndicate paid themselves yearly "bonuses" from the bond money collected from madams was given today as the trial of Charles "Lucky" Luciano and nine others moved into its third week.

Replying to Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook's request for speeding up testimony, Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey said an abbreviated list of witnesses would enable the state to complete its case by Tuesday night. The defense did not indicate the length of its presentation of evidence.

On the stand this morning was Thelma Jordan, 26-year-old admitted prostitute, who testified she had been the sweetheart of Benny Spiller, one of Luciano's co-defendants on compulsory prostitution indictments.

She testified Spiller once told her "I wish I had the money Lucky takes in in one week I could retire."

He then told of the bonus melon, she testified, although the amount was not mentioned.

She further testified that another defendant, Ralph Liguori, had threatened her and another prostitute if they should testify in the case.

House Will Take Townsend Action

Washington, May 25 (AP).—Speaker Byrns and Representative Bankhead, the Democratic leader, told newsmen today that definite action must be taken against Dr. F. E. Townsend for his defiance of a House investigating committee.

At a joint press conference at which they said the House was "not going to be flouted," both agreed the old age pension leader's walk-out on the committee and subsequent defiant statements were ample basis for a contempt action.

"The action defied the powers of Congress to make investigations," Bankhead said, "and some action, of course, must be taken."

Byrns said if the "House is not willing to assert its authority it would destroy all future congressional investigations."

Speaking personally, the speaker said he believed the case should be turned over to the federal court instead of being tried in the House.

"With a contempt trial before 435 members there is no telling how long it might last," Byrns said referring to the concerted drive for early adjournment.

Second Examination For Postmaster in the Village of Phoenicia

An examination for postmaster in the village of Phoenicia was held Saturday at the county court house here. This is the second examination which has been held within the past year to provide an eligible list from which a postmaster might be appointed. The first list was made up following an examination held in May of last year but apparently the list did not satisfy the powers that be and a new list was called for. Following the examination a year ago there was much speculation as to why no appointment was made.

The first examination resulted in Carroll F. Simpson, former postmaster, heading the list with Mary L. Newman second and Flavius Dibble, Phoenicia attorney, third. William Gormley was originally third on the list but later was disqualified by reason of not having had sufficient residence in the village and Mr. Dibble was moved up from fourth to third place. The first list was headed by Simpson, a Republican, but the other two names on the list were those of enrolled Democrats. Many of the residents of the village wondered why there was no appointment from the list since there were representatives from both parties on the list.

This wonderment resulted in inquiry to the postal department at Washington and brought forth the information from the First Assistant Postmaster General that after "careful consideration it was decided that it would be inadvisable to make selection from the eligible register certified by the Civil Service Commission and a new examination was called on April 16 by the department. It was also stated that the persons competing in the first examination need not compete in the new examination as the "ratings obtained by them will be considered by the Civil Service Commission in making up the new register." However the candidates on the first list also took the second examination.

Among the applicants who took the examination Saturday before the Civil Service examiners was Democratic Committeeman John J. McGrath of Phoenicia, Carroll F. Simpson, former postmaster who headed the first list; Jerome F. Newman, William Gormley, Eugene Gormley, Jr., Raymond Kirk and Flavius Dibbel.

The examination last spring was taken by Simpson, Dibbell, Eugene Gormel, Jr., William Gormley, Mary L. Newman and Raymond Kirk.

Eugene Gormley, Jr., has been acting postmaster at Phoenicia pending the certification of a list and the appointment of a permanent postmaster.

Tagging Major League Bases

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

It looks as if the Yankees will be hard to stop as long as Tony Lazzeri and Frank Crosetti continue to vie with rookie Joe Di Maggio for the Italian vote of the New York fans and the honor of setting the pace of the revived "Murderers Row."

The colorful "De Mag" should have the credit, perhaps, for the Yanks' hitting revival which has kept them at the top of the American League standing but today the veteran Lazzeri is the hero everywhere from Mulberry Bend to Telegraph Hill.

Tony, putting to rest all reports he isn't as spry as he used to be, staged a hitting spree in Philadelphia which produced six home runs in two games and a new American League record for runs batted in during a single contest. Another odd record or two fell before Tony's bat as he led the Yanks to a double victory over the Athletics Saturday and the most one-sided triumph of the season, 25 to 2, yesterday.

In Sunday's game, Lazzeri drove in eleven runs, hitting three homers—two with bases full—and a triple. That surpassed by two the old American League record held by Jimmie Foxx and fell just one short of Jim Bottomley's National League standard. The six homers in three consecutive games was one more than the mark held by Babe Ruth and several others while the record book fails to show any player hitting two homers with corners crammed in one game. To hold up their end of the argument, Crosetti smacked two homers and Di Maggio one. The Yanks hit eleven homers in two consecutive games for a new major league mark.

The week-end triumphs enabled the Yanks to increase their margin over Boston to 2½ games as the Red Sox absorbed a 4 to 12 drubbing from Washington yesterday. Jake Powell and 19-year old Buddy Lewis led the attack on the gold-plated pitching staff, the former with two doubles, a triple and a single, the latter with a homer, triple and two singles.

One-sided scores marked the entire program as the Cardinals and Giants kept pace in their duel for the National League lead. The only close game saw Chicago's White Sox turn back the St. Louis Browns 7 to 5 on Luke Sewell's homer in the ninth.

The Cards, a half game ahead in the senior circuit, trimmed the Cubs 7 to 1. A crowd of 22,500, the largest at St. Louis this season, saw the effective combination of Roy Parmelee's five-hit flinging and a 17-hit attack that drove Curt Davis to cover in his first start for Chicago. The Giants, paced by Sam Leslie, who smacked a homer, triple, double and two singles in five trips to the plate, routed the Phillies 13 to 5.

The Cincinnati Reds went into a three-way tie with Chicago and Pittsburgh for third place in the standing by trouncing the Pirates 12 to 1 behind Al Hollingsworth's five-hit flinging. The Dodgers made 15 hits in support of Van Mungo and trounced the Bees 11 to 2.

Lloyd Brown of Cleveland turned in the day's outstanding mound performance when he blanked the world champion Tigers with two hits to gain a 7 to 0 triumph. The Indians routed Schoolboy Rowe in two innings as Hal Trosky's ninth homer of the season featured their opening attack.

Kingston High School Downs Saugerties

With Charlie Bock allowing but five well scattered hits, Kingston High School pounded out a 10-2 victory over Saugerties Saturday. A real pitchers' battle prevailed for six innings during which time each team took the lead and up until the seventh the score was tied two all. Kingston cut loose with the fireworks in the seventh to push across six runs, adding two more in the eighth.

Charlie Bock hit safely three out of four trips to the plate, connecting once for a triple and Ad Beckhoven twice in four trips to the plate to lead the Kingston batters. Ed Bock, Tony Reinhardt, Tommy Maines and Chapple Van Derzee accounted for the rest of Kingston's safe hits.

Naudain's double and single was the best that was done by Saugerties against Charlie Bock's pitching. McDowell, Weisner and Rinaldi each had a hit.

Newburgh Wins DUSO Tennis Crown

Only three schools were represented at the DUSO tennis matches held at Middletown, including Newburgh, Kingston and Port Jervis. Newburgh was fortunate to draw the bye leaving Kingston and Port Jervis to play the opener.

Beichert advanced to the finals in the singles while Gordon and Svirsky advanced in the doubles with all the Kingston men winning in straight sets.

In the finals D'Aintolo of Newburgh vanquished Beichert in straight sets to win the DUSO singles championship. Newburgh's doubles of Tighe and Schuck took over Svirsky and Gordon also in straight sets to win the DUSO doubles crown.

Kaslich A. C. Defeat Berardi A. C. at the Fair Grounds Sunday

The Berardis outhit the Kaslich A. C. boys in their game at the Fair Grounds Sunday afternoon, but three of the Kaslich safeties were home runs, made by Minasian, Dawkins and Celuch, and the Kaslich A. C. took the game 6 to 5.

A fourth homer during the game was made by M Tiano.

Jimmy Merritt pitched for the winners. Bill Messing, the regular catcher, was absent, and Joe Messinger took his place behind the bat; Celuch played first in place of Tony DeBrosky, who was also missing. Ed Schoonmaker going into the outfield position.

Dawkins annexed two errors in the seventh helped the Berardis tie the score at 5 all, but Dawkins made up for it later by his homer.

Grunenwalds Win Fifth Straight Sunday Defeating Hurons, 9-7

Charley Grunenwald's outfit annexed their fifth straight win, at Stone Ridge Sunday afternoon, trampling on the humble Hurons by a score of 9 to 7.

Ky Embree was on the mound for the Home Leaders and blanked the Indians for five innings. However, lack of regular mound work took its toll and the Hurons ran up seven runs in the last four innings to creep up within two runs of the baker boys. But Ky's arm still retained enough stuff to retire the Indians in the final inning.

The Home Leaders put over what proved to be the winning markers in the ninth. Scherer singled and raced to third on Gadd's one base blow to center. Kelder booted Wenzel's grounder, Scherer scoring. Gadd tallied the final run on Lamb's poke to left.

Hank Cragan was on the mound for the Hurons and was the victim of 13 hits and some loose ball handling by his mates which kept him in constant trouble.

The bakers topped off their early inning scoring with four runs in the fourth, and after that were never headed.

Five Records Broken Saturday as Newburgh Wins DUSO Track Meet

Newburgh Free Academy won the DUSO track meet Saturday at Middletown for the fourth consecutive year since it was originated in 1933. The athletes of Middletown High School were their strongest rivals.

Newburgh chalked up a total of 51 2-5 points to 44 1-5 scored by the Middies. Monticello was third with 18, Port Jervis fourth with 17 1-5, Kingston fifth with 12 1-5 and Ellenville last with no points scored.

In the 13 events held, both Newburgh and Middletown copped five first places apiece while Monticello had two and Port Jervis one.

The DUSO meet swung into action in grand style with two records in as many events being broken in the morning session. Graham of Newburgh bettered the pole vault mark of 11:1¼ set by Moskowitz of Monticello in 1933, leaving the bar at 11:4. John "Dys" Nania of Middletown shattered his own discus record with a heave of 183 feet 10 inches which was 2 feet 5 inches better than his old record. Newburgh took all honors in the javelin throw, with a 149 feet 3½ inches throw by Pilus taking first. Mac Tiano, of Kingston, who placed fourth, threw the javelin on Saturday for his first time. Hughe Clarke of Newburgh bettered the high jump mark with a leap of 5 feet 6¼ inches which exceeded the old mark by a quarter of an inch. Mike Weiner of Kingston placed second. Little Abe Wolf of Monticello scampered across the 220 yard low hurdles in the record breaking time of :27.5 even though he had to buck a strong face wind. Wolf continued by winning the century dash clocked at :10.7 seconds still having to face this strong wind. Burgess of Port Jervis ran a beautiful race in the mile event to win in the time of 4:48.6 after leading all the way. The 440 yard dash was covered in the time of :54.4 seconds by Butler of Middletown. A new record of 21 feet 3 inches was set for the broad jump by Newburgh with Burkoski featuring. The 220 yard dash was won by Lowry of Newburgh in the time of :24.2 seconds with Mike Weiner of Kingston placing third.

The 880 yard run proved to be a thriller with Brodhead of Middletown coming out on top in the time of 2:09.5. Joe Hart, Kingston favorite, was boxed up on the final turn but managed to make up with a fast sprint to finish third. Nania of Middletown tried hard to break the shot put record held by Klein of Newburgh but his best effort was 42 feet 10½ inches, which gave him first place. Bill Kraft of Kingston placed fourth. The meet wound up with the 880 yard relay which was taken by Middletown's quartet, including Nelson, Dodd, Myers and Vail, which covered the distance in 1:35.7. Kingston's relay combination of Tiano, Wilber, Von Essen and Hart finished third.

The feature of the day was Lester Grafton's pole vaulting ability, having cleared the bar at 12 feet 1 inches to set a new all time record for the meet, having represented Walden in the village meet. Grafton's new record bettered the old mark by one foot.

With five new records having been made Saturday, the all time records for the DUSO meet are now as follows:

Kingston Legion Will Have Junior Baseball Team Again

Kingston Post, American Legion, is to have a junior baseball team again this summer, Ed Coughlin, athletic director, told a sports reporter this morning.

Two years ago Coughlin formed and coached a team for Kingston Post that won the New York state championship, thus bringing fame to Kingston. He hopes to get another formidable club together for competition. Knute Belchert, who so ably assisted him before, will help again.

Coughlin has set Wednesday, May 27, as the date for the first call to practice. The assemblage will be held at the Kingston Fair Ground at 5 p. m. Boys between the ages of 15 and 16 are desired for the team. Those who were not 17 before last March 31 are eligible.

Bob Bush, pitcher for No. 7 Public School, is the only one of the former state championship team eligible for this summer's club. This means that Coach Coughlin must develop a whole new team. He hopes to be able to do this to the satisfaction of the Legion which took great pride in the state champs two years ago. After winning the state pennant, Kingston went to Trenton to compete in the sectionals, meeting defeat after a hard battle.

The major baseball leagues are interested in the American Legion Juniors to the extent that they have contributed $40,000 to help promote their activities throughout the nation.

All boys interested in trying out for the Kingston team are urged to attend Wednesday's workout.

Off Again, On Again, As Stantons Defeat Pioneers Sunday, 7-2

A rather unusual situation developed in the game at Hasbrouck Park Sunday afternoon between the Stantons and Closi's Pioneers, which went to the Stanton 7-2, the winners making all their runs in the sixth inning, after play had been resumed following rain.

The Pioneers scored a run in the first inning, when Quasiano drove a liner through second. The drive went past McLean, who was given an error by the scorer, and Quasiano went home. They scored again in the second when Uhl walked, stole second and came home on Dizdik's single.

With the score 2-0 favor of the Pioneers game was called at the end of the fifth, following a hard shower and Uhl packed up his things and went home. Later the sun came out and it was decided to resume play.

Uhl was sent for, but before he returned to the field Emil Bock went in to pitch. Uhl re-entered the game in the sixth with two out, the bases full and five runs in. Two more were scored during the inning, following which Uhl held the Stantons scoreless for the remainder of the game.

Starting the sixth Cooper drew a pass. Wenzel doubled and they scored on McLean's single. McElrath singled, Berinato walked, Toffel was hit by a pitched ball and Studer's double cleaned the bases. Cooper, up for the second time, hit a single that brought Studer home. Cooper stole second and scored on Zoller's single.

Ben Toffel, pitching for the Stantons, was credited with a one-hit game, his second for the season.

Paterson Silk Sox Make 23 Hits and Trim Colonials 16-7

That Paterson Silk Sox outfit certainly sling wicked bats. They proved it Sunday at the Pan Am diamond when they drove the Kingston Colonials ace pitcher, King Kong Shackett, out of the box in the first inning after pounding him for six hits, including a homer and a double. Then Ted Freleigh tried his hand at topping the boys from Jersey and lasted until the third inning, when he retired after yielding up four singles and a double. The veteran Jewey Van Buren finished the game and got by in pretty good shape. The visitors made a total of 23 hits for the game, which is quite a few hits, if anyone should ask.

The Colonials didn't do so bad with the stick, getting a total of 11 hits off Kay, a southpaw. C. Tiano getting two singles and a triple and Paul Joyce annexing four safeties, one of them a double, in four times up. Hoffman also came through with a triple.

Politsky led the batting for the winners, with four hits, including a homer and a two-bagger.

Memorial Day the Colonials face the Robin Hoods at Hyde Park. Next Sunday, the Highland Falls Independents, Newburgh City League champions for the past two years, appear at the Pan Am field.

Aussie Aces —By Pap

Sport Slants

Stanley N. Doust, former Australian tennis ace and captain of the Australian Davis Cup team before the war, rates Adrian Quist, new Australian title-holder and star of the Australian team which is in this country to engage in the inter-zone Davis Cup matches with the United States, as the logical successor to Fred Perry, Wimpledon champion for the last two years—if Perry is to be dethroned.

Doust rather expects the United States to send over a brilliant team, but does not think highly of America's chances of winning the singles title on the court at Wimbledon. He writes:

"Because of the injury to his back which he received when playing Wilmer Allison in the semi-finals of the United States championships, Perry is not thought to be the same player that he was last July. Recent practice disclosed no ill effects, though he seemed reluctant to try a wide backhand stroke.

Quist Beat Perry

"Perry is confident that all of that will go when he gets on the court's at Wimbledon. And I think Perry's self-confidence is justifiable. Who are his most dangerous opponents? We know that Australia is to send Adrian Quist, the new champion, and J. H. Crawford, the former champion. Crowford must bow his knee to Perry as his master.

"But Quist had a victory over Perry in Australia before he became champion of that country, and I feel that in this short, quiet, modest lad Perry has a most formidable rival. In my opinion he is the alternative to Perry as this year's Wimbledon champion. Of course, the draw may prevent these two from meeting in the final.

"Then there is that very brilliant team from the United States led by Allison, the national champion, and Donald Budge, the red-haired youth who is not yet 21 and is sure to be a champion before many years have passed. John Van Ryn, too, is not to be despised in singles. Did he not give Perry his hardest match last year?

Shields Back In Form

"Francis X. Shields, the Adonis of the lawn tennis playing world, is said to have returned to his best form. Those who saw him in the inter-zone final two years ago still talk of his mighty serving and driving against the young Vivian McGrath. Austin also has cause to remember him, for he lost to Shields twice, after having a match point in one match and in the other leading by two sets to none and three games to one in the third set. Germany has in G. Von Cramm and H. Henkel very strong competitors. From France come A. Merlin, M. Bernard, A. Destremeau, C. Boussus and, of course, J. Rorotra. We are to have R. Menzel from Czechoslovakia, the much improved Polish and Swedish stars, and players from India, China and other Eastern countries.

"More than 30 nations will be represented in the entries for the individual championships and it is no exaggeration to say that the best of the world's players will be at Wimbledon. Women players, too, are coming from all parts of the world. If Mrs. Helen Wills Moody wins this year it will be her eighth Wimbledon championship and she will beat Mrs. Lambert-Chambers' record of seven victories.

"It is true that Miss Dorothy Round, Miss K. Stammers and Miss M. Scriven are capable, when in the very best of their form, of beating Mrs. Moody, when she is not quite at her best, but is may be assumed that the present champion will be fully prepared for all comers by the time the matches are played."

The ex-service boys plan to make this one even better than the two previous ones which have been held here and look forward to entertaining a larger number of members of the regiment than in other years.

Owens Repeats

English Girl Weds Hapsburg Prince

Vienna, May 25 (AP)—Blonde Marie Therese Wood, 25-year-old daughter of a British captain, was married in a setting of imperialistic splendor today to Prince Ernst von Hohenberg, of the House of Hapsburg.

The prince, whose whole name is Ernst Alfons Karl Franz Ignaz Maria Anton, Prince of Hohenberg, is the 32-year-old second son of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, whose murder at Sarajevo in 1914 touched off the World War.

The former Miss Wood is the daughter of Captain Jervis Wood and his wife, the former Hungarian Countess von Lonyay, long prominent in Vienna society.

She has been described as a typical English beauty, although she considers herself as much Austrian as British. She was born in Vienna and speaks English with a decided Teutonic accent.

After an Italian honeymoon, the couple will live in Styrian castle.

Spunky is one of the features with Kay Bros. circus and will be seen at each performance.

WORK 140 YEARS ON MAP; NOT DONE YET

J. H. Hawley, in Charge of Work, Explains Task.

Washington.—Mapmakers have been busy in the United States for 140 years under direct supervision of the government, but their job is far from finished.

Commander J. H. Hawley, acting head of the Commerce department's coast geodetic survey, explains the task by picking up a pencil and drawing lines on his desk to resemble a checkerboard.

From cross-hatch to cross-hatch Commander Hawley's pencil jumped.

"You see," he said, the entire job is by no means complete because we have only begun to round out our 'basic control project.' That is, to divide the country into 100-mile squares of latitude and longitude, with exact elevations above sea level at established points to allow topographical mappers to have a basis upon which to work.

"Many times we find places which are not actually where they think they are. There was, for instance, an island in the Philippines which was 14 miles away from where the charts listed it.

Offshore Progress Slow.

"Why, in plenty of our offshore surveys we are just replacing maps used by the old Spaniards."

Commander Hawley stopped to point over a bas-relief map of a bunch of islands and ocean to a hooknosed bust that stood upon a bookcase. The bust looked like an old Roman senator.

"That man," he said, "is old Ferdinand Hassler. He was the first man to run this bureau and he was started off by the personal appointment of the President in 1816. The President called him into his office and asked him what salary he wanted. Hassler said he wanted $3,000.

"He got the $5,000 and the job. The bureau has been surveying ever since."

It's quite a job. There are 100,000 miles of coastline to be marked and 32,000 miles of this belong to continental United States. Most of the rest is Alaska's.

Describes Surveyor's Work.

This is the way they go about it. Surveyors pick a point on the coast and fix its latitude and longitude. Then they figure out its relationship to the average height of the tide. That establishes level above the sea. This fixes a definite point from which to work inland for knowledge of both vertical and horizontal positions.

Boy Bound Out for 11 Years in Old Document

Binghamton, N. Y.—Feudal systems of a century ago were not limited to the European nations, but existed in New York state, it was disclosed by Arthur H. Brown, Whitney Point printer.

Brown brought to the light of modern times a yellow document, 110 years old, used to bind out as an apprentice a ten-year-old boy from a New York city almshouse.

"This indenture," the paper begins in flowery language, "witnesseth that Christopher Goodman, aged ten, hath put himself out with consent of the almshouse and Bridewell and doth voluntarily and of his own free will and accord put himself to apprentice to Joseph Miller of Bedford, Westchester county, a farmer."

The youngster failed to get much of a bargain in the light of modern advantages, the paper shows.

". . . to learn the art, trade, and mystery of a farmer for 11 years," the indenture continues, "to keep the secrets, to serve . . . nor waste nor unlawfully lend, nor contract matrimony nor gambling if it may damage the master, nor haunt almshouses and taverns."

Tearing Down Buildings to Escape High Tax Bills

Chicago.—The tearing down of buildings here to offset steadily mounting taxes broke all local records during 1935, statistics disclose, with permits issued for wrecking 1,907 structures in various parts of the city. In addition to this total, there were several hundred one-story buildings razed for which no permits were necessary.

This 1,907 total compares with 1,541 in 1934, 1,060 in 1933 and 219 in 1932.

Meanwhile, unless taxes reverse their trend, which after dropping in 1933 began to climb again in the 1934 assessments, it was predicted the wrecking of buildings to save taxes would continue on an even greater scale during 1936.

Approximately one-third of the buildings wrecked were torn down at the instance of the owners in order to reduce taxes and overhead, and for salvage of materials.

Synthetic Air Is Made by Chemists

Kansas City, Mo.—Synthetic air which seems life even more effectively than the air we breathe has been manufactured in the laboratory, it was revealed at the meeting of the American Chemical society.

The latest research, achieved after 14 years of experimentation, was reported by a Kansas scientist, J. Willard Hershey of McPherson, Kan.

Medical science has already adopted one type of synthetic air in the treatment of pneumonia.

O. E. S. Card Party

Public Campsites To Open May 27

Albany, May 25—New York's 29 public campsites in the Adirondack and Catskill Preserve will officially open May 27, Lithgow Osborne, conservation commissioner, announced today. These campsites which last season were extremely popular, with a man day registration of nearly 300,000, will be more popular than ever before, according to present indications. Campers from all over New York state and from every state in the Union, and all the provinces of Canada are found in the 29 campsites during the summer season. Mr. Osborne said that the conservation department will make every effort to serve the camping public and maintain the same standard of efficiency.

New York's forest preserve campsites are unique in camping development. Originally opened as a forest fire protective measure, they have assumed a most important place in the summer plans of thousands of New York vacationists. In the first place, no fee is charged for camping, on the theory that the forest preserve belongs to the people. Each campsite, according to size, has from one to three caretakers and, where swimming is popular, a life guard. Each camping group is allowed the maximum of individual action and the few simple rules and regulations are for the benefit of all concerned. Each campsite is equipped with proper sanitary facilities, the cleanliness of which is the marvel of all who use them. All garbage is collected daily. Each camping group is furnished a site with a stone fireplace and table. Everything else the camper brings with him—his tent, blankets, cooking equipment and food. No tents are supplied by the conservation department nor are cabins for rent on any public campsites on state land in the forest preserve. At nearly all public campsites the chief recreation consists of boating, bathing, fishing, hiking on forest trails and mountain climbing.

The four campsites in the Catskills are deservedly popular. At North Lake near Haines Falls, on the eastern escarpment of the Catskills, is probably the loftiest campsite in the state, at an elevation of 2,100 feet. The views of the Hudson Valley from the rim trail a few hundred feet east of the lake are awe-inspiring.

On the western side of the Catskills, in the midst of typical Catskill scenery and on the famous Beaverkill stream, is the Beaverkill campsite. The other two campsites, one in beautiful Woodland Valley and the other in the famous Stony Clove, between Phoenicia and Tannersville, have outstanding attractions for mountain climbers and hikers.

Miss Emma Palmer will entertain the members of the Ladies' Aid Thursday, June 4.

Broadway: "Captain January." The ace of the child actors plays her most sympathetic role in the story now showing at the Broadway, a saga of the sea wherein a rusty old lighthouse keeper rescues a little girl and keeps her with him without the formality of adoption papers. With Shirley Temple in the stellar role and surrounded by a talented cast of players including Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville, June Lang, Buddy Ebsen and June Darwell, the picture is a combination of laughs, tears and homespun simplicity, plus the vocal and dancing efforts of the little star. Directed by David Butler and based on a story by Laura E. Richards, the drama is well played, produced and acted. Three songs were written expressly for Miss Temple during the action by Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell. Lovable entertainment that should appeal to both adults and children.

Kingston: "Sutter's Gold" and "Silly Billies." Edward Arnold strides through the more serious of the pictures on the uptown double feature bill in the title role of Sutter, the legendary figure who proved a veritable Midas of his day. A costume picture, it moved thrillingly through his life and destiny in grim and entertaining fashion. "Silly Billies" brings the lunatic Wheeler and Woolsey in their latest comedy venture, a story of the days of the covered wagon with the pair fighting Indians and doing all manner of antics for the enjoyment of their audience. Fred Guoil directed and others in the cast are Dorothy Lee, Harry Woods, Chief Thunderbird, Delmar Watson and Richard Alexander.

Orpheum: "Barbary Coast." California's more rugged days are pictured on the Orpheum screen in this story of San Francisco when the city was ruled by men with the strongest hand with law and order the laughing stock of the day. It is also the history of a girl who makes good in one of the glittering gambling palaces because the boss of the Barbary Coast falls for her. The mob scenes are well conceived, the action is brisk throughout and the cast offers three big names in Edward G. Robinson, Joel McCrea and Miriam Hopkins.

Tomorrow.

Broadway: Same.

Kingston: "Yellow Dust" and "Too Many Parents." Things out Nevada way are pretty sordid when "Yellow Dust" starts to unwind on the Kingston screen. Gold has been discovered there and a lot of tough hombres are riding wild and careless in the gold rush territory. So into it all rides square jawed Richard Dix, with ideas of law and order and the nerve to make his wants known. It's a slam-bang western yarn, far superior in acting and plot to the majority of worthless cow country films turned out by the carload in Hollywood, and Mr. Dix is supported by a capable cast of players including Leila Hyams, Moroni Olsen, Andy Clyde, Jessie Ralph and Onslow Stephens. An RKO-Radio picture directed by Wallace Fox. "Too Many Parents" is the other feature, a comedy play with Frances Farmer heading a good cast.

Orpheum: Same.

King Flies to Look Over Queen Mary

Southampton, Eng., May 25. (AP).—King Edward flew from Windsor today—the second time he has taken to the air since becoming sovereign—to head Britain's royal family in a final inspection of the giant liner Queen Mary.

Wearing a straw hat, he traveled in his own scarlet and blue bi-plane, with his personal pilot, Flight Lieutenant E. H. Feilden, at the controls

A great crowd lined the roads from East Leigh, where he landed, to the dock of the Queen Mary.

Queen Mary and the other adult women of the royal family wore black, but little Princess Elizabeth appeared in a new grey tweed coat and a mauve straw hat.

Actress On Stand

Mary Miles Minter, star of silent pictures, is shown on the witness stand in the trial of a suit brought by her mother and sister against a brokerage firm. (Associated Press Photo)

Cary Grant, screen actor, ran away from his English home at 15 to join a company of acrobats.

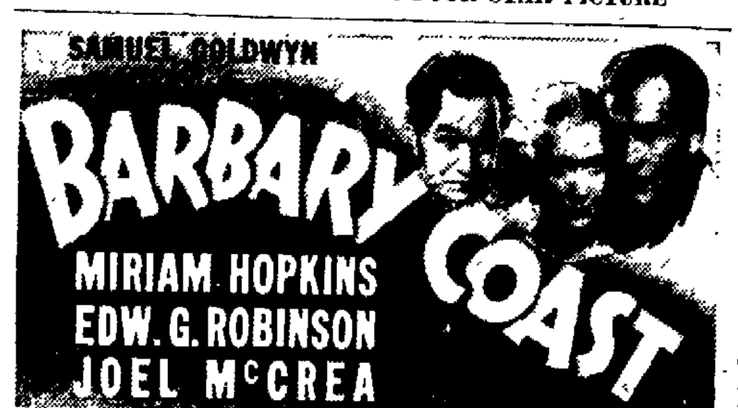

Robert Cummins of the movies spends his days off learning to operate a glider. He's a licensed pilot too.

PLAN UNDER-SEA WEDDING

John C. Benson, retired sea captain, and Mrs. Elizabeth Pardee of Chicago are shown at Seattle, examining some of the diving equipment they expect to wear for their wedding June 14. The ceremony will take place eight feet under the surface of Puget sound, they say, if they can find a minister who will don a diving suit to join them. (Associated Press Photo)

Poor Seed Causing Failure With Corn

Geneva, N. Y., May 25.—Despite repeated warnings earlier in the season that the germination of many lots of seed corn examined in the seed testing laboratory at the State Experiment Station here was low and that care should be exercised in using only strong, vigorous seed, many farmers have planted untested corn much of which has already given evidence that only a partial stand will be obtained and that replanting will be necessary on many farms, declares Prof. M. T. Munn, in charge of the seed laboratory.

"Last fall corn did not mature well and most of it contained too much moisture when freezing weather set in with the result that its germination was seriously affected," he continues. "In fact, many claim that the situation this year is as serious as it was in 1918 when there was but little good seed corn available."

Signs of Frost Injury

An examination of the kernels of corn as they are being shelled will give a clue to any serious freezing injury, says this authority. Two telltale clues should be watched for, namely, blistered kernels and amber-colored germs. Both of these are almost positive proof that the corn has been frozen and will not germinate. While some farmers have realized the situation and have taken steps to avoid using such seed, samples of seed corn still coming to the seed testing laboratory indicate that many others do not appreciate the risks that they are running this season.

Where corn has not yet been planted, farmers are urged to examine the seed critically for signs of frost injury and to test the seed before planting. In those cases where corn has already been planted and where it will be found necessary to replant because of poor stands, every precaution should be taken to make certain that the second planting is of well-adapted, strong, vigorous seed. Unfortunately, all three of the main spring crops, barley, oats, and corn, have shown very erratic germination this spring, especially corn, and the situation is bound to be reflected in the field stands of these crops. For that reason it is believed that care in obtaining the best possible seed stocks will pay for the time and effort required.

Noting that jackrabbits were destroying his growing wheat, C. F. Shafer of Hugoton, Kas., put out poison and next day found 500 dead rabbits.

MENUS OF THE DAY

Dinner From Leftovers

(Usually the first of the week finds the refrigerator well stocked with leftovers which a little "imagination" can convert into very tasty food combinations.)

Dinner Serving Three Or Four
Eggs And Ham Benedict
Glazed Bananas
Buttered Spinach
Toasted Rolls Plum Butter
Pear Salad
Chocolate Bread Pudding
Hard Sauce
Coffee (Hot Or Iced)

Eggs And Ham Benedict

4 pieces boiled ham	¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs	⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter	¼ teaspoon chopped parsley
3 tablespoons flour	⅓ teaspoon chopped onions
1½ cups milk

Fit ham in individual buttered baking dishes. Add eggs and bake until eggs have "set." Cover with sauce made by blending butter and flour and cooking with rest of ingredients until creamy sauce forms. The mixture should be stirred constantly while cooking. If preferred the ham can be placed in shallow baking pan and eggs added.

Glazed Bananas

4 bananas	2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter	¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar	2 tablespoons currant jelly

Peel bananas, brown 5 minutes in butter melted in frying pan. Sprinkle with sugar, juice and salt. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Spread with jelly and carefully remove to serving platter.

Chocolate Bread Pudding

2 squares chocolate, grated	1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup sugar	2 cups milk
1 cup water	¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups bread, cubed	2 eggs or 4 yolks

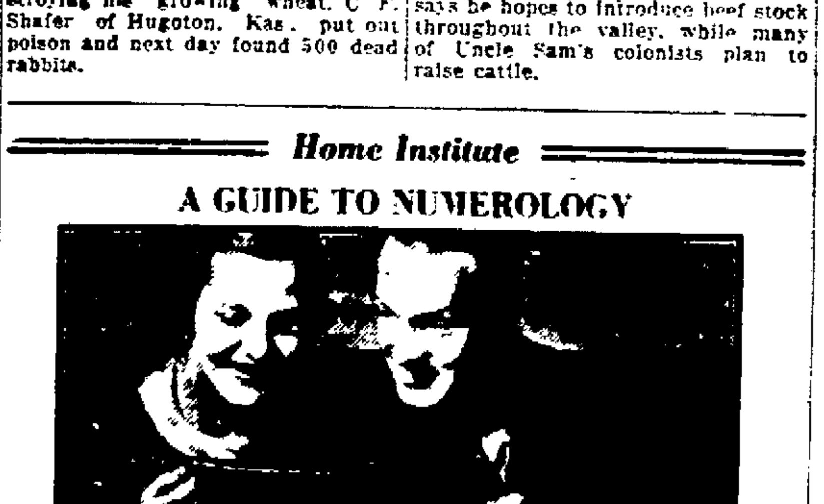

Mix sugar with chocolate, add water and cook slowly, stirring constantly until creamy sauce forms. Beat well. Add rest of ingredients. Pour into buttered shallow baking dish. Bake 30 minutes in slow oven. Cool and chill.

Cattle To Matanuska Valley

Palmer, Alaska (AP) — Purebred beef cattle, grazing on the hills overlooking to Matanuska valley, will soon be common. The purchase of an initial herd of 200 head has been made by A. A. Shonbeck. Shonbeck says he hopes to introduce beef stock throughout the valley, while many of Uncle Sam's colonists plan to raise cattle.

A GUIDE TO NUMEROLOGY

Numerology—the most fascinating of pastimes for two, for a crowd, or just to pass an hour all by yourself!

It's perfectly easy to figure up the letters of your name by the simple system of addition used in numerology, as Alice and Paul have done.

"Look, Alice, you're an Eight," says Paul, and skimming through the character study of Eight's he reads, "You are a master of strategy in handling people, generous, broad-minded, tolerant and understanding. . . You recognize the potency of flattery. Aha! Now I really do have your number!"

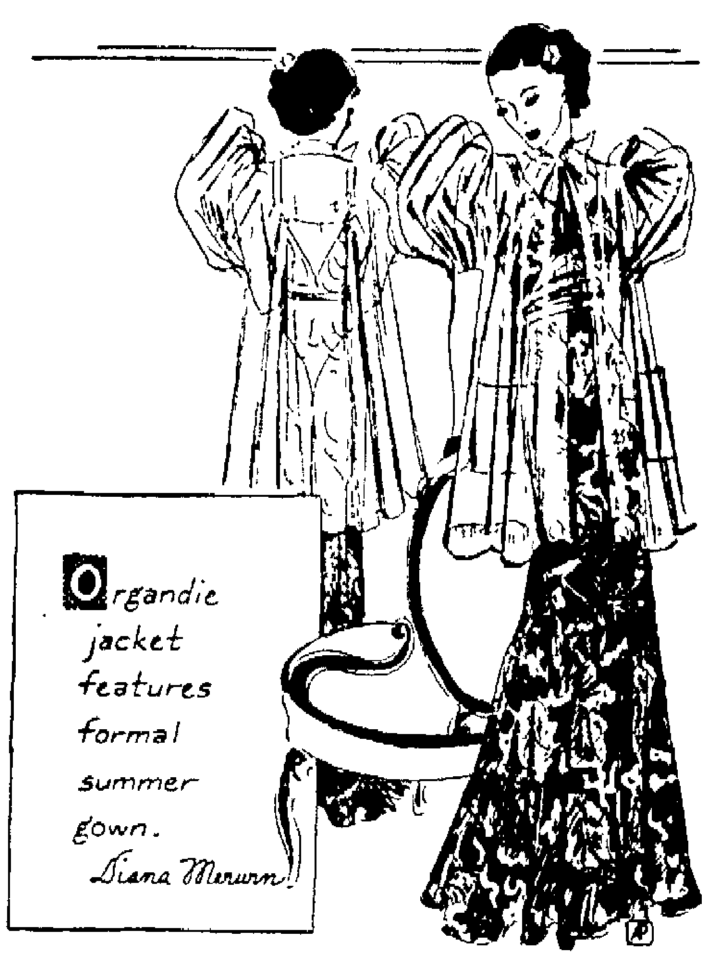

"Well, there must be something to say about the Two's which is your number." Alice replies. "You're companionable, ..., you're ...ing, you'll say anything to keep the peace. Beware of flatterers!"

And there's a lot more. About the meaning of the first vowel in a name. How to figure up a name as it reveals abilities. What "number" is best as a marriage-partner. How to estimate the vibration of the name of the town where you live, your street address, your phone number, your birth date. Which are your lucky days?

Everybody gets a kick out of numerology, and it is made so clear and simple in our 40-page booklet, SECRETS OF NUMEROLOGY. Learn the interpretation of names, and you'll be the hit of the party. Unmask the real nature of famous people by figuring names!

Send 15c for our booklet, Secrets of Numerology to Kingston Daily Freeman Home Institute, 119 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of Booklet.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

Organdie and linen each are popular summertime fabrics, and when combined make ideal costumes.

This promises to be a big season for cotton—its practicability and coolness cannot be over estimated. Organdie, mousseline de soie, plain and colorful printed linen, pique, embroidered net and dotted swiss are some of the fabrics highlighted in the smartest frocks.

The striking jacketed formal illustrated above uses vividly printed linen for the gown with a jacket of white organdie which permits the print to peek through faintly.

The large leaf design in red, black and green contrasts with its white background. The gown follows the figure snugly to hips, then flares out in a full graceful hemline. The neckline at the front is V-shaped while the back is low. A narrow black patent leather belt girdles the waistline.

Full, flowing and wispy is the finger-tip length jacket of white organdie with a crisp self tie neckline, two large patch pockets and huge, puffed sleeves, that are short and worn pushed up.

Many Features at St. John's Fair

St. John's Fair, a Pastoral, will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 2 and 3, and will be such an affair as might have been held by the peasants on one of the large feudal estates in medieval times. Booths, made of native white birch, will be arranged about the precincts of the church. Early this week the poster, made by Miss Emily Hoysradt, will be displayed over the entrance to the church. Everything is being done to give the fair a true medieval flavor. August Franz will fill the role of the traditional bell ringer; a Jolly Roger flag will mark the cave where the pirates will dispense their wares from their treasure chest. French jewelry, Canadian baby blankets and scarfs and materials woven on the hand looms of the Misses Lane of this city will also be a feature of the Parish Aid booth.

The Boy Scouts under the direction of William Wright and Clark Lechtenauer are painting the running horse weather vanes. The pattern for these horses was drawn by Miss Emily Hoysradt, using Bold Venture, winner of the derby, as a model. For the children there will be a fascinating display of pin wheels. They will also be allowed to enter the races on Bucephalus and Pegasus, the two fabulous horses which will be ridden to the fair by Arthur Lacey and John Kwant.

A feature of the fair will be the cafeteria supper which will be served each day beginning at 5:30 o'clock at the sign of the "White Horse Inn." Here the caterers will specialize in old English foods, "shepherd's pie", "gooseberry fool" and ratifia" cakes.

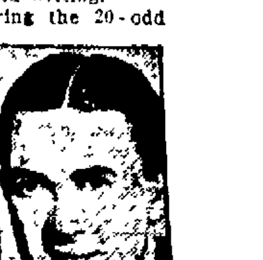

A display of posters will be shown in the windows of various stores. These are being made by Miss Jeannie Stahl, who is a pupil of Zaven Melik.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—When he was 17, James Hilton started writing.

Many times during the 20-odd years since then, James Hilton has been about to abandon writing. The public did not seem to care.

JAMES HILTON

In one of his periods of despondency, Hilton decided to give the public what it wanted. He wrote a book that (he thought) would sell. Rather to his surprise, he discovered that his book written especially for the public was not what the public wanted, after all. And so—

"I decided," the young author says, "to write a final book, just the way I wanted it written, to please myself alone, before I quit writing."

Book Made History

This book was "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." The rest of the story is told by screen and stage and best-seller lists. "Mr. Chips" is to be filmed by Metro, Columbia is making "Lost Horizon," Alexander Korda in England will make "Without Armor," and Leslie Howard has a stage version of "And Now Goodbye" on his date book. Even that early effort—the one done especially for the public—is being sold for pictures.

Hilton himself, clean-cut Cambridge Englishman, calmly enthusiastic, modest and—one suspects—still a little surprised, finds it all ironical.

"I always wanted to travel around the world and I never had the money," he explains. "Now I have the money—and I haven't time."

Learned A Lesson

He is one writer, in consequence of his experiences, firmly convinced that an author should not try to "write down" to the public.

In Hollywood Hilton is engaged on the screen play of "Camille" for Greta Garbo. He has been concerned with "modernizing" the Dumas story—for instance, alleviating the tubercular heroine's coughing spells to a degree compatible with modern ideas of healthy romance, and providing a useful occupation for Camille's Armand.

Today's audiences would find Camille's consumptive osculations disgusting rather than romantic, and a young man like Armand without profession or occupation would be regarded with distrust.

So in the picture Camille will save her hemorrhages until the end, and Armand will be a professional man.
